MINORU WINS DERBY; SIR MARTIN FALLS

Now, Gentlemen, You Can Shout! Cries the King as They Approach, the American Riderless.

FOUL PLAY RUMORS SCOUTED

Before the Accident Sir Martin Seemed Likely to Win—Americans Lose $300,000—Whitney Gets Two Races.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 26.—"Now, gentlemen, you can shout," the King cried out in a lusty voice, breaking the tense silence as the horses in the Derby of 1909 rounded Tattenham Corner this afternoon it was seen that Minoru was leading, with Sir Martin, the chestnut that carried the hopes of Americans, galloping wide and riderless around the famous corner. In response to the King's cry, the cheers of a multitude swelled in a tremendous wave of sound.

"The King! the King!" it was until Minoru was past the post, a bare head in front of Louviers, justifying his name, which is Japanese for success. The time was 2:42 2-5.

Then the vast crowds on Epsom Downs went mad with loyal enthusiasm. The brazen notes from the horns of the guards of the American coaches that were lined up opposite the royal box were heard above the cheering, playing the British national anthem, and the air was taken up and sung lustily.

A member of his Majesty's suite said afterward that he had never known King Edward to be so markedly affected. As he watched the nerve-racking struggle to the finish through his glasses his hands trembled so that he could scarcely keep the binoculars in position. The first King of England to win the Derby, he came down from the royal box to lead his horse to the weighing inclosure, as he had twice done as Prince of Wales.

The crowd from every side had burst through the police cordons, and his Majesty was closely surrounded by the frantic throng, some of whom clapped him on the back familiarly.

"It's a good thing for racing," said he three or four times over, and then he returned to the box, where he came forward with the Queen and the Prince of Wales and formally acknowledged the popular plaudits, Queen Alexandra also bowing repeatedly.

Meanwhile the riderless Sir Martin had been captured and his jockey, "Skeets" Martin, had been carried on a stretcher to the jockey's quarters, suffering from the effects of his severe fall and a kick on the head from a horse's hoof. It took some time to ascertain exactly what happened. Martin, though not dangerously hurt, was dazed and unable to make any statement.

Fall Apparently Accidental.

Suggestions of foul play spread like wildfire. The American had been crowded against the rail and thrown over it, was one report. Another was that Sir Martin had been in collision with another horse, either unnamed or specifically said to be Electric Boy, and his jockey had been pitched off.

THE NEW YORK TIMES's correspondent made careful and exhaustive inquiries, which go to show that the unfortunate affair was entirely accidental. But for it there is every probability that another American horse would have been added to the list of Derby winners. In the judgment of capable and experienced jockeys like Higgs, who a few years ago was at the head of English riders and who to-day bestrode William IV., third past the post, Sir Martin had the race practically won when, coming down the hill at Tattenham Corner, he crossed his legs and pitched his jockey clean over his head. Higgs said Sir Martin was quite by himself at the time.

Other testimony to similar effect there was in plenty. An American who is a keen racegoer and an owner of horses, who preferred that his name should not be used, told me there was no doubt that Sir Martin's discomfiture was due to his crossing his legs, and nobody was to blame.

The accident was a tremendous disappointment to Americans in London. Sir Martin was backed at the track to such an extent that he attained first place in the betting honors, and started favorite at 3 to 1, while Minoru was at 7 to 2. One of the American visitors was particularly disappointed.

"It was a moral victory for Sir Martin," he said, "and with that most of us can bear with philosophy our financial losses. But in my case I have not even the satisfaction of feeling that my money was lost on a good American horse. I intended to back Sir Martin, but had not been five minutes at the track when my pocketbook was stolen."

Big Muster of Americans.

Although the weather conditions were unattractive, the attendance at Epsom was larger even than usual, Americans making a big muster. The Duchess of Marlborough sat in one of the boxes with her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, and Mrs. Tiffany and Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt were also there. As owing to both the rain and the crowd people could not move about much, it is impossible to give anything like a complete roster of even the well-known transatlantic vistors, but here

KING HONORS LADY GRANARD.

She Is to Have the Distinction of Dining Him in Derby Week.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 26.—Countess Granard, I learned to-day, has attained an honor which may be said to be among the highest social ambitions of London hostesses, that of entertaining the King during Derby week.

To-night his Majesty, after giving a dinner at Buckingham Palace to the members of the Jockey Club, in accordance with his usual custom on Derby Day, attended a ball given by Lady Farquhar, with whom the Queen dined, and to-morrow their Majesties will dine with Lady Granard.

The honor is all the more marked as Lady Granard only so recently made her début among great London hostesses. The news, which is only beginning to percolate the inner circles of London society, is causing quite a sensation.

CARUSO TO HAVE OPERATION.

Enters Hospital at Milan—Was Angry When Plan Was Published.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, May 26.—Enrico Caruso entered to-day the private hospital of the throat specialist, Prof. Della Vedova, in Milan, where he will undergo a surgical operation.

There are hopes of restoring the voice of the illustrious tenor, who was similarly operated upon some years ago. English specialists whom he recently consulted expect good results to follow the treatment, and that he will be able to fulfill his American contract next Winter.

Many in the musical world here, however, think the great singer will require a prolonged rest.

When Enrico Caruso sailed on the Mauretania on April 14 THE NEW YORK TIMES published a statement to the effect that the tenor was suffering from an attack of rheumatism of the vocal cords and that he would go to Milan to place himself under the care of a specialist in the hope that a series of operations would restore his throat to something like its normal condition.

As his ship was about to sail Caruso denied this statement strenuously.

SUBWAY BILL SIGNED.

Hughes Approves Measure for Building with Private Capital.

ALBANY, May 26.—Gov. Hughes tonight signed the Travis-Robinson bill designed to permit the building of additional subways in New York City by private capital, public funds, or by assessments on the property benefited. The measure authorizes the city to take over any new subways built by private interests.

Gov. Hughes vetoed the Stillwell bill designed to permit the Public Service Commission in New York City to make contracts for the construction, equipment, maintenance, and operation of a subway extension. The bill conflicts with the Travis-Robinson bill which the Governor signed, as both measures provide for the amendment of the same section of the rapid transit law.

"The Travis-Robinson bill," says the Governor in a memorandum filed with the Stillwell bill, "is a comprehensive measure designed to meet in a just way and with proper safeguards of the public interests the necessities of the city with regard to rapid transit development. Nothing should be done to introduce uncertainty or confusion. If the present bill were signed first the subsequent signing of the Travis-Robinson bill would supersede it. If the Travis-Robinson bill were signed first, the signing of this bill would override important provisions of the former. From any point of view this bill is inadvisable and cannot be approved."

Under the provisions of the Travis-Robinson bill, signed by Gov. Hughes yesterday, it will be possible for subways or other transit utilities to be constructed and owned by corporations, operating under franchises given by the city or for the city to build them and lease the systems. The bill makes a number of changes in the old law.

Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission sent a letter to President Shonts of the Interborough-Metropolitan system yesterday afternoon, after receiving word of the signing of the Travis-Robinson bill. He asked if the Interborough would like to send in some amended proposition for extension of the Subway system to fit in with the new law.

The Interborough has been working on amended plans and it is expected that they will be presented to the Commission and the Board of Estimate late next month. The extensions concerned in these plans involve the proposed route from the Grand Central Station up Lexington Avenue to the Bronx, and from Times Square through Seventh Avenue and to the Battery, by way of Washington Square.

FIND ARMOR PLATE FLAWS.

North Dakota's Defect Leads to Examination of New Battleships.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Flaws in the armor plate for the new battleships under construction have been discovered by the Naval Board of Examiners, and it was announced to-day that one of the large plates on the North Dakota has been found defective. The plate was passed upon favorably by the examiners and was put in place when the flaw developed. The heavy steel has blistered in much the same manner that wet paint blisters under intense heat.

The fact that the plate deteriorated after having been swung into position has led the naval authorities to undertake an examination of all plates now attached to the sides of the various vessels. A thorough examination of the plates intended for the battleship Delaware will be made Saturday by the board, and a rigid inspection of the other vessels will follow.

AUTO HITS WOMAN, SPEEDS TO SMASH

Goes Faster After Felling Mrs. Lockwood in Harlem and Snaps Off a Wheel.

OCCUPANTS FLEE TO WOODS

Yelling Crowd in Pursuit Along Audubon Avenue Fails to Catch Them—Two Men in Machine Known.

A large touring automobile in which were seated two men, while speeding north at a great rate along Audubon Avenue about 9 o'clock last night, knocked down and seriously injured Mrs. H. T. Lockwood, wife of Henry T. Lockwood, a metal merchant of 100 William Street, almost opposite her home, 165 Audubon Avenue, without slackening speed, and followed by a howling crowd the automobile went on, and at 181st Street and Audubon Avenue, after again narrowly missing knocking down a woman bumped into the side of the curb with such force as almost to upset the machine.

The impact was severe enough to break off the rear right wheel. The car bumped along on three wheels until finally it broke down at 184th Street and Audubon Avenue. Hearing the cries of the mob at their back, the two men jumped out and disappeared in the brushwood of Speedway Park. At midnight they had not been captured, but a large force of police were busy scouring the neighborhood.

From investigations hurriedly made by the police they discovered that the machine belonged to Elias Gusaroff, a builder, of 600 West 140th Street. One of the occupants was said to be Edward Thomson of 15 Audubon Avenue, Mr. Gusaroff's chauffeur. It was also ascertained that the car had been taken out without Mr. Gusaroff's authority from the Hudson Automobile Garage, 518 West 145th Street, where is was stored.

Mrs. Lockwood had been taking a walk with her husband. Reaching their home they started across Audubon Avenue. A shout caused Mr. Lockwood to look around, and he say the automobile coming toward him at a great rate. He grabbed his wife to pull her aside, but as he did so the machine swerved in the same direction. Mrs. Lockwood received a glancing blow, was knocked to the ground, and left unconscious.

Her husband picked her up and carried her home. Dr. Lynn L. Fulkerson, who lives at the same address, was called in. He found that Mrs. Lockwood was suffering from a fractured right arm, a broken nose, and many cuts and bruises.

After hitting Mrs. Lockwood the driver put on more speed. The avenue was crowded, and the accident was seen by many. Their shouts were taken up by those further on, and soon a hundred men were racing after the car. Just then the wind blew off the hat of one of the occupants. It was a Derby, with the initials "C. C." inside.

As the car neared 181st Street, which is a popular crossing, the crowd scattered. A man and a woman were in danger of being hit, and the machine took a sudden swerve toward the curb, which it hit with terrific force. It seemed as if it would turn over, but somehow it righted itself. However, the blow had snapped off the rear right-hand wheel at the axle, the wheel bounding on to the curb and landing inside Bryant's saloon at the corner, through the open door, scattering the men drinking at the bar.

After the car had righted itself, the driver steered out into the middle of the road, and despite the fact that the machine was a wheel short, continued at a good clip. But at 184th Street, which is opposite Speedway Park, the broken axle caught in the road and brought the machine to a standstill. The two men, seeing the crowd nearing them, leaped from the car and rushed across the road into the park, where they were lost in the darkness among the brushwood and trees.

An examination of the wrecked car was the first act of the police on reaching it. In it they found a chauffeur's cap, which inside bore a chauffeur's license, the number of which was 1,803L. Investigation showed that this was issued to W. J. McCormick of 1,825 Amsterdam Avenue, a chauffeur employed at the Hudson Automobile Garage of 518 West 145th Street.

McCormick was traced down, but he proved an alibi. However, he did say that the cap was his, and that he had left it at the garage. The police then learned that Mr. Gusaroff's machine had been taken from the garage about 9 o'clock in the evening by his chauffeur, Edward Thomson. They also found that Thomson was alone in the car when he took it out.

A visit to Mr. Gusaroff's home showed that Thomson had no authority to take the machine out. He had done so without the permission of his employer, according to Philip Gusaroff, son of the owner of the machine.

At midnight the police of the West 152d Street Station were out in force, searching high and low for Thomson and his companion, the owner of the hat with the initials "C. C." Early this morning their efforts had not been successful.

$10,000 ART ROBBERY AT T. S. CLARK'S HOME

HALF THE LOOT RECOVERED

Amateur Cracksmen Sold It for $20 for Old Metal—Robbery Last Winter, but Kept Quiet—Steel Blinds Now.

While Thomas Shields Clark, the son of the late Mrs. Elisabeth S. Porter, widow of Bishop Henry C. Potter, was in Paris last Winter, thieves got into his home, at 50 Riverside Drive, and carried off nearly $10,000 worth of art treasures, jewelry, valuable antique bronzes, ornaments, silverware, and wearing apparel.

The police kept the robbery quiet, and the facts only came out yesterday through the knowledge that Mr. Clark has had installed in his home an elaborate system of burglar alarms and protective blinds to foil any future attempts at robbery. Part of the loot, in fact nearly half of it, has been recovered.

No one saw the thieves. As nearly as the caretaker could discover, they got in through one of the windows and had managed to take the booty out of the door, probably to a wagon which they had waiting outside. The caretaker cabled a report of the loss to Mr. Clark and he returned at once, notifying the police of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station on Easter Sunday.

The police kept the robbery quiet, as they thought it might be easier to capture the thieves if they had no warning, but no arrests have been made. A diligent and systematic search in all the art dealers' shops and other places in the city has been kept up, with the result that in the last week the bronzes have been recovered. These are all Greek and Roman antiques, and valued altogether at more than $5,000. In the junk shop where they were found the dealer said he had bought the lot for $20. As the collection is one of the finest in New York, it is believed the thieves were not experienced cracksmen and knew nothing of the value of the articles, believing them to be salable only as old metal.

Mr. Clark's work as a painter and sculptor is well known. Nearly the entire first floor of Seventy-seventh Street and Broadway is given over to his studio, which not only contains his collections, but is also where he does much of his work.

Upon his return from Europe Mr. Clark made strenuous efforts to locate his stolen property, and to have the thieves arrested. Now that he has succeeded in recovering his bronzes he is more or less content and has gone to his Summer home, in Lenox, leaving his house again in charge of a caretaker.

This time, however, he is determined that there shall be no repetition of the robbery, and he has obtained every known successful device for the foiling of burglars. The protective system consists of sliding steel blinds and burglar alarms on doors and windows, which will arouse the whole neighborhood on the least attempt to open any of them. If any safe breaker succeeds in getting through the steel blinds he will set going half a dozen burglar alarms, which will arouse the whole block and the caretaker, who now sleeps in the house. All of the windows on the first floor and in the basement, including the enormous studio, in which most of the art treasures of Mr. Clark are arranged, are now protected in this manner, and safeguards are being installed in the rest of the house.

Mr. Clark, it is said, carried burglar insurance with the National Surety Company, but the officials of that company refused to make any statement yesterday when asked about the robbery.

GIRL RIDES IN BALLOON.

Phyllis Layter Takes 40-Mile Trip with Aeronauts in the Massachusetts.

AMHERST, Mass., May 26.—The balloon Massachusetts, after a trip of 40 miles from Pittsfield, where it ascended at 2:50 P. M. to-day, landed at 6:12 to-night on the farm of William Crooker on the town line between Amherst and Sunderland. The highest elevation reached was 6,500 feet.

The balloon was piloted by Charles J. Glidden of Boston, who was accompanied by Frederick S. Osgood of Boston, Franklin B. Layter of Pittsfield, and the latter's 14-year-old daughter Phyllis.

Prof. Todd of the Amherst College Observatory watched the flight of the balloon for nearly an hour and a half with the observatory telescope, and with a party of members of the Amherst Aero Club entered an automobile and met the balloon when it landed.

SKELETON BUILDING AFIRE 250 FEET UP

Oddest Kind of a Blaze in the New Ritz-Carlton Interests a Thousand Folk.

CROWD HELPS THE FIREMEN

With Suggestions, Mostly Adopted—Bucket Brigade and Clubs Failing, the Fire Finally Burns Out.

There was quite a fire just after 7 o'clock last night on the fifteenth floor of the steel skeleton framework which ultimately will be the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, at Forty-seventh Street and Madison Avenue. For two hours and a half it burned, and after it was all over everybody agreed that the manner of its discovery and the vicissitudes encountered in putting it out made as remarkable a fire story as ever New York had.

It wasn't really such a dangerous fire, but a whole lot of people saw it shining out over the city. From a distance it looked like some big will-o'-the-wisp, burning there in the midst of the network of steel beams and girders, apparently feeding on nothing but metal. As a matter of fact the flames were in a pile of wooden beams, planks, and flooring laid loosely over the concrete floor. This wood was soaked with oil drippings. There was also some tarred rope.

Sparks flew out and scattered over the roofs of the near-by houses, but from the street at the base of the building not a bit of the real fire could be seen. In fact, the watchmen on guard were loath at first to believe there was a fire there at all.

A red-hot rivet dropped by a workman just before quitting time in the evening was probably responsible for the blaze. The rivet probably fell among the loose boards below.

Dan Kelly and Tom Shanley, watchmen, wandering about the lower stories of the building an hour and a half after the thousand or so begrimed iron workers and concrete layers had trooped homeward down the long ladders, knew nothing of this. But Policeman Walsh of the Traffic Squad, far down Madison Avenue, chanced to look skyward and noticed a bright flame near the top of the hotel structure. Others noticed it too, and pointed it out to Walsh. He thought little of it then, but when he looked again, ten minutes later, the flames had grown larger.

Walsh started off at a canter for the building. By that time others had seen the blaze from afar and were hastening toward Forty-seventh Street and Madison Avenue. When they told Kelly that something was afire near the top of the building he laughed at them.

"G'wan, y're kidding me," said the watchman.

With some difficulty he was convinced that the structure was really afire, and then Walsh and the two watchmen, both of whom are advanced in years, set out up the ladders for the upper stories. There are two elevators used for building material during working hours, but the engineer had gone home.

It was a long climb and a tiresome one to the fifteenth floor up the improvised ladders the workmen had built, and the three men were pretty well exhausted when they got to the fifteenth floor. The whole centre of the floor space was ablaze.

They tried to beat out the edge of the fire ring with pieces of wood, but soon gave this up and retraced their steps to the street. Half way down they were joined by a fireman who had been on his way home and, seeing the blaze from far down the street, hastened to the scene. The fireman hustled to a telephone and called up Engine Company 65, in West Forty-third Street. In a little while the engine was on the scene with a crew of about a dozen men.

The dozen firemen clambered up to the fifteenth floor, looked at the blaze, and came down again, their knees shaking, for it was a tough climb, even for firemen. One of the men from the company ran across Madison Avenue to the office of the American Express Company and borrowed a couple of fire extinguishers. He and one of his comrades lugged these up the ladder and dumped the contents on the flames. It made no impression whatever. Several of the firemen then began to hack at the burning wood with axes and to beat at the flames on the outskirts of the fire with cudgels. A brisk wind was blowing, which served to fan the blaze like the blast from a giant bellows.

By this time a great crowd had gathered in the street at the base of the building. The watchmen could find nothing to do, so they told the crowd what a climb it was up to the fifteenth floor. The firemen wondered what was best to do. The crowd offered suggestions.

"Why don't you start a bucket brigade?" asked one man.

The firemen tried it. Buckets were produced and filled at a hydrant near by and two or three firemen started up with them. The higher they went the heavier grew the buckets. By the time they reached the fifteenth floor the buckets were half empty. So that wouldn't do.

Next hoisting up buckets of water by a pulley rope which led to the top of the building through an open shaft was tried. A bucketful of water started up, struck a beam about the tenth floor, and the water came pouring down on the heads of those who were operating the pulley. So they gave that up.

All this while the fire was burning along merrily, scattering sparks around. There were more suggestions from the crowd. About this time Policeman Jost Ruth of the East Fifty-first Street Station came stumbling down the stairs. He had made the climb to the top.

"Never again for mine," he panted. "That's worse than a Marathon."

About this time it came out that a box containing blasting powder was in a lot adjoining the building. But no one got frightened.

Then some one suggested that the engineer of the fire engine might start up the temporary electric freight elevator. This was acted upon at once. The engineer went into the basement, knocked out the side of the lever box and started one of the elevators. When the platform elevator reached the street level two barrels were rolled on it. Several of the firemen began to fill the barrels with water, using buckets.

Another suggestion was offered by one of those standing by. It was to use the fire hose to fill the barrels. This, too, was adopted unanimously. In a few minutes the barrels were full. One fireman climbed to the fifteenth floor to await their arrival, but he had neglected to agree upon a code of signals with the engineer. The result was that when the elevator got up half way and stopped he rang four bells, then three, and then two. Each time the elevator started either up or down or stopped.

At last the elevator, with its burden of water, arrived at the fifteenth floor. The fire was practically out. It was then 9 o'clock, and most of the woodwork there was burned.

VANDERBILT PEARLS CHEAP?

Expert Says Gems Stolen from Him Are Worth Only $300.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 26.—"Things are not always what they seem," sagely observed Magistrate Plowden when the Alfred Vanderbilt pearl robbery came before him to-day. Mr. Vanderbilt's solicitor said the jewels were valued at $5,000 and were insured for that sum, as they were real black pearls.

A jeweler's assistant controverted this, saying that they were not real black, but only gray pearls, and together worth only about $250 or $300.

Mr. Vanderbilt's valet, who was charged with taking the pearls, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

PARSONS HURRIES ABROAD.

Engineer Sails the Day After Landing—His Wife Ill in London.

Among the passengers sailing on the Mauretania yesterday was William Barclay Parsons, consulting engineer of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Mr. Parsons only arrived from England on Tuesday afternoon on the Kaiser Wilhelm II.

Before reaching port he received a wireless dispatch telling him that his wife, whom he had left in London, had had whom he had left in London, had caught a severe chill, but that there was no cause for uneasiness. At 3 o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Parsons was aroused at home by a messenger bringing a cable dispatch stating that his wife was very ill of pneumonia and advising him to come at once.

Mr. Parsons packed up the few belongings he had unpacked the night before, and secured a berth on the Mauretania.

8,000 MILES TO A SURGEON.

Argentine Diplomat Taking His Wife to Berlin for an Operation.

Among the 157 cabin passengers arriving yesterday on the Royal Mail steam packet Tagus was Garcia Mansilla, the Argentine Minister to Peru, who is taking his wife to Berlin to be operated on for appendicitis.

The distance from Lima to Berlin via Panama is about 8,000 miles, but as surgeons in Peru said that Mrs. Mansilla could stand the journey, the Minister decided to take her to Berlin, as the German surgeons are famed in South America for their skill in operating for appendicitis. He was met at the pier by Vincente Fernandez, the Argentine Consul General in this city, and a representative of W. R. Grace & Sons.

Señor Mansilla and his wife will sail for Hamburg on Saturday by the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria.

BOY SLAYER IS CAPTURED.

Maryland Youth Admits Killing His Mother, but Not His Father.

LEONARDTOWN, Md., May 26.—Joseph Forrest, the nineteen-year-old boy who has been sought since May 15 on suspicion of having killed his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Forrest, at their home near Oakdale, was captured to-day at the home of Brent Davis, near Chaptico, twelve miles from Oakdale, where he applied for food. A preliminary hearing was held at Chaptico, and afterward the boy was brought to the jail here. He says that he accidentally shot his mother while attempting to shoot a hawk, but denies all knowledge of the killing of his father.

When the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest were discovered a week ago last Saturday they had evidently been dead at least a week. Both had been killed while in their beds in a room of the house. The son is thought to be mentally weak.

JEROME REPLIES IN GREAT TUMULT

"WHITNEY MURDER" QUERY

Police Eject Questioners, but Jerome Calls Them Back—Audience for and Against Him Alternately.

The long-heralded Jerome "heckle" took place last night at Cooper Union before a very large and very hysterical audience. The District Attorney's account of his stewardship was received with varied sentiments on the part of the crowd, which fluctuated repeatedly from hisses to shouts of aproval and back again. The aisles between the rows of seats were lined with policemen and force was used by them repeatedly to quiet particularly insistent interrogators of Mr. Jerome.

When Mr. Jerome had finished his speech he was subjected to a running fire of questions, which kept up until nearly midnight. They ranged from everything from "Why have you not busted the trusts?" to queries concerning minor cases, which Mr. Jerome said he knew nothing about.

One of the oral questions put was, "How about the murderer of William C. Whitney?" Mr. Jerome's reply to this was that he had investigated a scandalous story to the effect that Mr. Whitney was killed in a brawl by a man notorious in this city, and he believed that any statement that Mr. Whitney's life was taken "by his own hand or that of any other than God" was untrue.

A dozen men were on their feet nearly all the time, shouting to be heard, and Charles Sprague Smith, Director of the People's Institute, under the auspices of which the meeting was held, finally had to divide the floor into sections and take them up in succession. Several times the questioners became so insistent that the police stepped in and ejected them, but each time this happened Mr. Jerome ordered them brought back. This got him the approval of the crowd at the start of the "heckle," and he was loudly cheered each time this happened.

In his speech, before the "heckle" started, Mr. Jerome turned all the bitterness of his irony against his critics, referring repeatedly to The Journal, The American, The World, Col. William N. Amory, and the King Committee. He devoted the principal part of his time to the traction investigations, making the direct charge that the first probe was started at the instance of James R. Keene, a "bear operator."

Col. Amory occupied a seat on the platform and repeatedly interrupted Mr. Jerome. At the start of the oral questioning from the floor, Mr. Smith asked the audience if it would like to hear from Col. Amory, and it replied with a noisy vote in the affirmative. Ten minutes was given him, but he talked for fifteen, the crowd insisting that he go on after his time had expired.

It was after 10 o'clock when Mr. Smith asked the crowd if they were ready for the oral questions from the floor. "I have a lot of material left here," said Mr. Jerome, "but I guess the audience would rather have the oral questions." The crowd shouted its approval and then the question of hearing Col. Amory was put to them.

A Dodger, Amory Says.

He began in a high-pitched, strained voice, and Mr. Smith had to rap for order for several moments before he could be heard. Then he continued: "Of the 101 questions which I submitted to Mr. Jerome he has answered three, referred to sixteen, and dodged the rest. I knew he would do this. He has not been treating you people honestly or truhtfully." This was greeted with hisses and "boo's," and the Colonel's voice was drowned out again. He stood his ground, however, and Mr. Smith shouted between loud raps for order. "Mr. Jerome has said many things here to-night about Mr. Amory. Do you want to give him a chance to reply or not?"

"All I want is fair play," cried Mr. Amory.

"Go on," a voice was heard above the uproar, "he's had his say."

"Mr. Jerome has said that I am poor," continued the Colonel. "I am, but it is because I have been fighting him and the Metropolitan criminals for six years and I intend to finish my life fighting him and these other criminals.

Opening of the Meeting.

"I did go to Talbot J. Taylor, and ask for money to pay for my accountants, and I did so at Mr. Jerome's request. When he tells you that he had not the knowledge of this he tells you what is not true. He has spoken of Commissioner Hand's report. He did whitewash Mr. Jerome, that is true; but he did not pass on all the charges that had been brought against the District Attorney, and that was the small knothole through which Mr. Jerome escaped."

The meeting was scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock. An hour before that time a great crowd stood clamoring at the gates. At 7 o'clock the Fourth Avenue entrance, providing easy access to the platform and the first rows in the auditorium, was thrown open. A couple of hundred reserved seat tickets had been issued to friends of Mr. Jerome and members of the People's Institute, under whose auspices the meeting was held. Holders of such tickets were admitted by the Fourth Avenue entrance.

Among the early arrivals were many of Mr. Jerome's former assistants and a good many women. The platform and reserved front rows were quickly filled. One of the first to claim a platform seat was William N. Amory, former Secretary of the Third Avenue Railroad and foe of the present traction management. Mr. Amory, it will be remembered, brought his fight on the traction interests into the District Attorney's office, and when dissatisfied with the result was instrumental in bringing the charges against District Attorney Jerome which were later dismissed by Gov. Hughes on the referee's report. Mr. Amory had submitted 101 questions for Mr. Jerome to answer.

Among some of the other persons on the platform were former Assistant District Attorneys Howard S. Gans and William Rand, Jr., Col. Robert Grier Monroe, Julius Henry Cohen of the Citizens' Union, and J. Aspinall Hodge.

A later arrival was former Senator John C. Spooner of Wisconsin. He didn't seek the platform, but pressed his way into a seat in the front row of the auditorium.

At 7:15 the doors were thrown open to the general public. Inspector Herlihy had fifty policemen guarding the doors. A score or more policemen had been posted in the hall itself in anticipation of a repetition of the stormy scenes which attended Mr. Jerome's last appearance before a Cooper Union audience. The policemen stood four or five in each aisle with only a few feet intervening. It would have taken them only a second to jump to any spot where trouble was threatened.

A veritable football rush followed the opening of the doors. There was in this crowd a scattering of politicians from the various organizations which will figure in the next municipal campaign, and who realized that the value of District Attorney Jerome as an asset on any ticket must depend largely on how he acquitted himself at the meeting.

Audience Applauds Jerome.

Mr. Jerome came face to face with this audience at seven minutes before the appointed hour of 8. He came unescorted on to the platform. His appearance was the signal for a volley of applause, which began in the reserved seat section, but soon became general. There was just the faintest smile in recognition of the greeting. Mr. Jerome, for the first couple of minutes, busied himself unwrapping some books and records he was to use in answering the questions submitted to him. Then he chose a seat well back on the platform and sat down.

Everybody in the audience seemed to keep an eye on the big clock over the platform. When its hands pointed to the hour of 8 there was a ripple of applause, and a minute or two later there was impatience. Charles Sprague Smith, Director of the People's Institute and Master of Ceremonies for the evening, then appeared. He said that the action of Mr. Jerome in coming before the audience to give an accounting of his stewardship had brought into play a very great principle and furnished a precedent which other men in public life should be compelled to follow. This principle and this precedent, said Mr. Smith, were really much more important than the question of whether Mr. Jerome had made good or failed to make good.

"And therefore," he went on, "it is an important thing that the meeting should be conducted in an orderly, intelligent fashion. I am not going to place my body or anything else as a shield between the audience and Jerome. He is going to stand up and take his medicine right hot off the bat, but in your indignation or in your praise so restrain yourself that order be preserved and the impression of this meeting be such as to elicit a repetition of this thing in this city and throughout the country. Now I deliver our District Attorney to your mercy."

In the applause that greeted Mr. Jerome as he arose to speak there was an early indication of an audience very well disposed toward the man who thus had elected to meet his critics and make his defense before the people to whom he owed his election. For nearly a minute the old Cooper Union hall rang with it. Jerome flushed and then smiled with pleasure.

He Cites Charges Against Him.

Mr. Jerome began by saying that most of the criticism leveled against him by his enemies could be grouped under the charge that he had not lived up to his ante-election pledges; that he had been remiss in dealing with the cases affecting the traction interests, the insurance companies, and the Ice Trust that had come before him during his two administrations.

"If any honest man will investigate what I have done in regard to these various matters and still have any doubt that I have done my full duty in regard to them, then I shall be perfectly willing to accept his individual verdict if he be an honest and intelligent man," said Mr. Jerome.

At this there was renewed applause. Mr. Jerome followed this up by saying that he had only made two ante-election pledges. One that he would follow trails of wrongdoing even if they led into the office of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company and the other that he would be the people's counsel on the criminal side.

Mr. Jerome said great confusion existed with regard to the extent of his duties. He said his duties were to prosecute cases sent him by the City Magistrates or private complaints, accompanied by proper evidence, and to assist the Grand Jury in any investigation it may make. This was the full extent of his duty. In no sense was it his duty, nor was the power or means given him, to go out generally and police the city or enforce laws when it was the duty of the police to see that they were lived up to.

Puts It Up to Bingham.

"Therefore, every time a parrot squeaks in the flat above you, complain to the Board of Health or to Bingham, and don't complain to me. I have no power to remedy it. And if there is a disorderly house in your neighborhood that you don't like, take it out of Bingham, don't take it out of me," said Mr. Jerome.

He said that in answering the questions submitted in writing it would be necessary for him, in order to avoid unnecessary waste of time, to refer frequently to the report made by Richard L. Hand, the Commissioner who heard the testimony on the charges preferred by the committee of minority stockholders in the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, inasmuch as many of the questions had been answered before the referee, who had exonerated him from any neglect of duty—a finding since confirmed by Gov. Hughes.

"I say the hatred of my enemies all culminated at that time, and every resource that wealth and power gave them was brought to bear to show that I had been derelict in my duty. But out of 180,000 criminal matters which in six years had passed through my office there were 23 charges. Figure the percentage of 23 to 180,000. Those charges were made in writing and answered by me, and read to the Governor.

"The Governor referred them to Richard L. Hand—charges were presented by counsel. Richard L. Hand had before him a result of his investigation; he took testimony for more than two weeks; he called forty witnesses—all the witnesses that The Journal and The World and The American and Amory and all the rag-bag tale and riff-raff that live about those great institutions [applause and laughter] were produced; all those anonymous kinds of newspaper men were there and reported it, and told about it as they knew all about it, and the absent gum-shoe man was there, too.

Acquitted on Every Charge.

"There were three thousand pages of testimony taken. In the aggregate there were upward of fifteen thousand pages of testimony submitted to Richard L. Hand. He took up every one of those twenty-three charges and analyzed them, and found not only that they were not proved, but specifically as to each one that I had disproved it. And that covered six years of work in that great office with one hundred and eighty thousand matters having passed under my jurisdiction, resulting in twenty-three charges. Twenty-three seemed to be an unlucky number for the charges.

"That report was made to Hughes. Hughes, you know, is a capable, accurate, painstaking, conscientious lawyer.

"He kept that evidence and he kept that report, studying it for more than seven months, and then he, too, came out and agreed with Hand and confirmed the report. [Applause.]

"I make this explanation in regard to that report because I want you to know what it is."

It was at this point the first disturbance of the evening occurred. Mr. Amory, sitting within a few feet of Mr. Jerome, had listened with blanched face to the severe roasting to which Mr. Jerome had subjected his enemies. Now he arose, and pointing his finger at the District Attorney yelled:

"You haven't stated it accurately. Every one of these charges was not passed upon by Commissioner Hand, and you know it."

"You'll remain here only on condition not to interrupt," cried Mr. Smith, arising.

The audience was in a turmoil in a moment.

"All hot air," shouted a man well toward the front. A policeman advanced to the row in which the shouter was seated. Quiet was restored, and Mr. Jerome could again make himself heard.

Taking up the Amory questions, Mr. Jerome then said that he had fulfilled his pledge that he would follow trails of wrongdoing even if they led into the office of the Metropolitan Street Railway. He said he had made three general investigations, occupying together eleven months, of traction affairs, and five investigations of different phases of traction offenses regarding which complaints had been submitted to him.

"Two of those investigations," said Mr. Jerome, "were on Mr. Amory's own complaint. One of the four-months ones. The first one was soon after I came into office, and Mr. Amory, in 1903, submitted charges to me. He was then associated with a lawyer of the name of Drakeman in the matter.

A Wall Street Speculation Game.

"I did not know then that they were associated with or connected with the son-in-law of James R. Keene, the biggest bear operator in the Street. I did not know then that either or both of them had been telegraphing their friends to go short of Metropolitan securities. I did not know then that through the paper they represented through its city editor, Burton, and poor Joe Eakins, now dead, they were trading on their employers' paper and getting it to publish bear articles when they went short on stock in Bird Coler's office, and Coler lacked the courage of a man to preserve intact the confidence of his clients in order to placate Tom Ryan. I did not know all those things then. I did not know Talbot J. Taylor had paid the money."

"You did know it," shouted Mr. Amory, in great excitement.

"I did not know that Taylor, Jim Keene's son-in-law, had paid the money," retorted Mr. Jerome, turning on his antagonist.

"I say you did know it, and I can prove it," shouted Mr. Amory.

"Go on! Go on!" shouted several men in the audience.

"Mr. Amory says I did know it," said Mr. Jerome. "Then it is true that Mr. Keene's son-in-law, J. Talbot Taylor, paid the money?"

At this the entire audience turned its laugh on Mr. Amory. There was applause which lasted for a long time. Jerome smiled and again faced the crowd. The audience was still in a turmoil. Mr. Smith got up and began pounding the desk with a huge gavel.

"We want to conduct this meeting in an orderly manner," he yelled.

"We want the truth," shouted a man in the audience.

"We cannot have a true expression without order. Please let us have order; there are others here who want to ask questions besides Mr. Amory," begged Mr. Smith.

His Inquiry in Good Faith.

Mr. Jerome, when a semblance of quiet was restored, went on to say that he had taken it all in good faith that he had placed Mr. Schurman, afterward a law partner of Gov. Hughes, in charge of an investigation which lasted four months, and that nothing had come of it. Commissioner Hand and Gov. Hughes had passed on the charge that he had been derelict to duty in his conduct of this investigation and had exonerated him.

"Well, we've got your number, Mr. Amory," yelled a young man in the second row, as Mr. Jerome finished shaking his fist at the pale man on the platform.

Mr. Jerome took up his subsequent traction investigations, following the "shocking testimony" of Anthony N. Brady before the Public Service Commission in connection with the Wall & Cortlandt Street Ferry transaction. He said he had been asked why he had found no trace of this transaction on the Metropolitan books, since destroyed, when he had them in his possession. The explanation, he said, was simple. The transaction was on the books of the Metropolitan Securities Company, which had not been destroyed, but which he had never examined.

"I called and examined before the November Grand Jury not only Brady, but Thomas F. Ryan, Jacob Schiff, Jarvis, Paul D. Cravath, Lemuel E. Quigg, G. G. Haven, Boardman, Beardsley, and Sayer—everybody I could lay my hands on, until Mr. Ivins, who had brought out the original testimony, admitted that every source of information had been exhausted. I could do no more."

Mr. Jerome said in order to follow up his ante-election pledge that he would be the people's attorney he had moved down into the most thickly populated district in the city and esablished a complaint bureau open every night of the week down there to make it easy for the people to bring their troubles to his door.

Drew Only His Salary, He Says.

"Who has another or different way to suggest?" asked Mr. Jerome. "Every hour of my time has been given to your service. The law does not forbid me to practice, but not a civil matter have I touched in these seven years, although I have had big offers. The law does not forbid me to be put in on the side on good things, but every dollar I have had in seven years has come from you through the city paymaster. [Applause.]

"Every dollar is in that check book, (putting hand on the book,) and that check book is open for your inspection at any reasonable hour."

Jerome waved his check book aloft and the crowd applauded.

"And so I say, gentlemen," Mr. Jerome went on, "in my humble opinion—I don't say in my opinion—I know that I have made good on my ante-election promises."

Mr. Jerome then took up one of Mr. Amory's questions based on a loan by the State Trust Company of $2,000,000 to J. F. Shea, an office boy of Thomas F. Ryan. Speaking with great bitterness and sarcasm, Mr. Jerome said:

"And now the sagacious Amory, right on the trail of the wrongdoing public official, the man dominated by the traction magnates who had violated all his preelection pledges, puts to him these desperately difficult questions to answer:

The Shea Loan Outlawed.

"'Did you ever prosecute and punish Ryan for this crime?' No. And let me tell you why. In the first place, Ryan was never charged with it. The person who was charged with the crime was Elihu Root, and, secondly, the loan to Shea took place on the 19th day of August, 1899, and was a misdemeanor, and was therefore outlawed by law on the 20th day of August, 1901, and I did not come into office until the 1st of January, 1902. [Applause.]

"Meanwhile Theodore Roosevelt, who, whether you like it or not, is an honest man, [Applause,] Theodore Roosevelt was Governor of the State, and, it being brought to his attention, he appointed a special commissioner, Gen. Andrews, who had been a Police Commissioner with him, to investigate the matter, and Gen. Andrews investigated and reported to Gov. Roosevelt. Gardiner was District Attorney at the time, and he took no action. Roosevelt was Governor, and he took no action, although he had power to send the Attorney General here. Before Gardiner's term expired Gardiner was removed and Philbin was appointed by Roosevelt. Philbin held office for a year, he took no action in the matter, and when I came into office the action had already been outlawed six months under the laws of this State, so that I think this question is also simple. [Applause.]

Big Men Jerome Indicted.

"But the innuendo of all this is, of course, that I was afraid to prosecute men of any position or power in the community, and if you followed the newspapers and got their version you would think I never prosecuted anybody except some poor fellow who stole a loaf of bread out of a baker's wagon. They say, What has Jerome done in insurance? He has not touched an insurance grafter. He was afraid of the dominating influence of J. Pierpont Morgan. He was afraid of the dominating influence of Thomas F. Ryan. I have found fifty-six indictments against insurance officials, following up the Armstrong committee's work. There were only four important insurance men in the city that I didn't indict. One is dead, one was out of his mind, and in regard to the other two there was not a scintilla of evidence, and never has been. I indicted Gillette and Grannis, the two Vice Presidents of the Mutual. Gillette is dead.

"I indicted Perkins—this terrible bugaboo about J. Pierpont Morgan—Perkins, First Vice President of the New York Life, J. Pierpont Morgan's partner, and Charles S. Fairchild, President of the Trust Company and a Director of the New York Life—those two—the two principal officials of the New York Life, except its President, who was dead, and against whom I, myself, had never seen any evidence that would warrant him being prosecuted criminally were he living to-day. (Applause.) It is no more than simple justice to the memory of a man that was loved by many to say that the most careful scrutiny (and I had made it) showed that justice would have been done from the lips of another—a man occupying a higher official position than I had, if he had had the courage—it was a justice that would have been done from his lips, to say that of McCall, that there was no evidence disclosed against McCall that would have warranted his indictment for any criminal offence.

A Shot at Arthur Brisbane.

"But I am not here to defend others. I am here to defend myself. I indicted, I found thirteen indictments against Hegeman, President of the Metropolitan; six against Perkins, six against Fairchild, six against Gillette, nineteen against Jordan, the Controller of the Equitable, Tom Ryan's company. I couldn't indict Ryan; he was not in it. All he had done was to buy the company. I have yet to learn whether Arthur Brisbane thinks buying companies is in itself larceny. I indicted the Presidents, the general counsel, the Vice Presidents, the two Burnhams, and Eldridge, of the Mutual Reserve; I indicted the Controller of the Washington Life, and Frank G. Koohns of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company. I think that fifty-six indictments against those men does not show an abject terror of the financial world. I also indicted Orlando Thomas and Charles W. Morse.

Col. Amory then spoke again.

"He has spoken of the Wall and Cortlandt Streets ferry deal. He should have said 'steal.' All I have to say to Mr. Jerome is that if he had been the District Attorney that we hoped he would be, he would have sent Tom Ryan and the other traction criminals to jail."

"But my time is very short. You have had two hours of this."

Amory Reads Grand Jury's Letter.

"Go on! Go on!" "Sit down!" "He's said enough!" cried the crowd. When the renewed uproar had subsided, Col. Amory read extracts from a letter written by a member of the Grand Jury, before which Mr. Jerome examined the traction witnesses. This letter read:

> It seemed that the witnesses had been coached in the District Attorney's office. He defended and protected them instead of prosecuting them. If I was of criminal bent I would take to train wrecking with the confident assurance that my operations would be safe as long as he is in the District Attorney's office.

Here Col. Amory was interrupted again. "What's his name?" "Who is he?" demanded a dozen voices. The Colonel seemed loath to give the name at first, but the audience became so insistent that he cried, "All right! It was a reputable business man of this city, Mr. Monroe L. Simon."

Continuing to read from the letter Col. Amory gave this extract:

> It was a pitiful and scandalous exhibition. To me there is but one remedy left, and that is for the Governor to appoint a special prosecutor in this matter. If he does this I will wager my head against a football that indictments will be returned.

"We want odds," shouted a voice, and it was several moments before the crowd would listen to the Colonel again.

"Is that a question or a stump speech?" bawled one man.

"Mr. Jerome put words into the witnesses' mouths," Col. Amory's voice was finally heard, still reading from the letter, "and in some way succeeded in explaining every matter away."

"Now," Amory continued, "not only have I accused Mr. Jerome of protecting these criminals, but so has a Grand Juryman of the County of New York."

"Only one!" cried a voice as the Colonel retired. Then Mr. Jerome stepped onto the firing line. As he came forward smiling he was greeted with loud applause.

There was another question proposed by Mr. Amory which furnished District Attorney Jerome with more ammunition against his enemies. It was the assertion of James W. Osborne, Mr. Jerome's former assistant and opponent in the last campaign for District Attorney, to the effect that he had produced evidence before Magistrate Barlow to show that the Metropolitan had looted the Third Avenue Railroad to the tune of $30,000,000. Col. Amory said that the Metropolitan had never disproved this charge, and wanted to know why Mr. Jerome had not acted on an accusation coming from such a "high legal source."

"The very extravagance of the amount stolen," said Mr. Jeorme, "shows the absurdity of the charge. I have conversed with Mr. Whitridge, the receiver of the road, on this subject, and he in turn has conversed with Mr. Amory about this wholesale theft, but the receiver, Mr. Whitridge, seemed to be of the opinion in regard to this particular thing that there never was any such sum of money there to steal, and he didn't know how it could be stolen under the circumstances.

"The charge is absurd. James W. Osborne—poor Jim—is not a high legal authority and never will be. [Laughter.] There is no use wasting time on it. [Laughter and applause.]

Amory Never Worth $200,000 to Anybody.

"Then he goes on to ask why I was not furnished with written evidence in 1903 and the evidence of two witnesses, my former law partner, Mr. Daniel Nason, and Mr. William H. Page, Jr., another lawyer employed by the Metropolitan, that they had attempted to bribe him—Mr. Amory—while a State witness, with $200,000 to withdraw charges filed against the Metropolitan by him. No, I never was furnished with such evidence. And I never saw the time when Amory was worth $200,000 to anybody." [Laughter.]

Another question proposed by Amory was why Mr. Jerome had not prosecuted him when he (Amory) had frequently libeled him.

"Well, it isn't very pleasant to tell him," said Mr. Jerome, again turning the laugh on Mr. Amory, "but I always regarded him as entirely irresponsible—financially. So there was no good in suing him, and I could not prosecute him criminally in my own county.

"Of course it will occur to you to ask why I sued The Journal. It is because I cannot prosecute them criminally here, and because every dollar I recover, after counsel fees have been paid, will be devoted to some proper charity in the City of New York if I am successful.

"Not one dollar that those literary prostitutes make in plying their vocation shall ever sully my palm," shouted Jerome amid tremendous applause.

Again Mr. Jerome called attention to a letter which appeared in a morning paper written by a Grand Juryman, saying that Mr. Jerome had sought to defend instead of prosecute those accused before that body.

"The juryman who wrote that letter," said Mr. Jerome, "I found conniving with the worst corporation blackmailer in New York, and I nailed him redhanded in the Grand Jury room, trying to bear Delaware & Hudson stock to cover a short deal in which he was involved. I did not pay any attention. He isn't worth a cent, either. He is bankrupt to-day."

"Who is he?" shouted a man in the audience.

"You wouldn't know him if I told you," shouted Jerome.

"Stop your abuse and answer the charges," yelled another man in the hall.

Taking up the charges that he had been remiss in his duty in prosecuting the Ice Trust, Mr. Jerome entered a general denial, and explained what he had done in connection with the matter. He said:

"The only people who were not satisfied at the time, so far as my office was concerned, were the newspapers The Journal and The World. Well, the man that owned The World, one of those great papers, sent to Maine to inquire about this thing. When the man he sent got back he tried to blackmail the President of the American Ice Company, Mr. Ohler. While he was in Maine, inquiring of this matter for his paper, he bought an option on some 4,000 tons of ice, came back and tried to get Mr. Ohler to take it over at a higher price than they were paying for ice f. o. b. from the same station. Don't that show you the good faith of some of those people who want to mislead the people in their double dealings?"

A Conners-Murphy Ice Speculation.

Mr. Jerome said the proceedings instituted by Attorney General Jackson could be traced to a little deal in Ice stock by Charles F. Murphy and State Chairman William J. Conners. They had gone short of Ice, and stood to lose $84,000. They called up John Gates on the telephone and promised that if their loss was made good there probably would be nothing more heard about the Ice investigation by the Attorney General.

"Justice Goff practically orders the Grand Jury to find an indictment, virtually overruling the Court of Appeals in doing so. At that the indictment was found only against the corporation. A demurrer was filed with Justice Goff, and he has not had the courage of his convictions to render a decision to this day," said Mr. Jerome.

"Couldn't you prove that we have an Ice Trust in town?" shouted a man in the audience, who afterward turned out to be John T. Cronin, former Independence Leaguer, now a leading member of the Municipal Democracy.

"No, that's what I tried to do," said Mr. Jerome.

"Every man in the hall knows there is an ice trust here," shouted Cronin among a medley of applause, hisses, and cat calls, in which the applause predominated.

"If there was an honest man in the District Attorney's office they would be in jail by this time," shouted Mr. Cronin again.

"It's easy to get off hot air," cried Mr. Jerome, "but let me ask you this—"

"Give your answer," shouted somebody in the audience. By this time the din was tremendous, and Inspector Herlihy pushed Mr. Cronin toward the door.

"He has been put out," shouted a hundred voices at once. Cries of "Shame!" and "Fair play!" were also heard.

"Bring that man back, Inspector," shouted Jerome at the top of his voice.

At that time Inspector Herlihy relented. Cronin was escorted down the aisle to a seat near the platform. "Do I understand that you say there is an Ice Trust in this town that violates the criminal law?"

"Yes, Sir," said Mr. Cronin.

"And you believe an honest effort would prove it and put the officers in jail?"

"I do very easily," said Cronin.

"Well, you know that Osborne was sent down here by the Attorney General, and that he handled the case before the Grand Jury, and that Justice Goff has held up the matter for more than ten months. Don't you think that Justice Goff is competent to pass upon this matter?"

"I do, sir," said Mr. Cronin. "I have great respect for him."

"Under the circumstances do you think it is fair to denounce me and my assistant as crooks?" asked Jerome.

"I have not denounced you and all your assistants as crooks, Mr. District Attorney," said Cronin, "but I believe I voice the sentiments of a great mass of voters in this city, who supported you for District Attorney, and I am one of them, when I say that they believe, and they have reason to believe, that under your administration of the District Attorney's office there has been one law for the rich and another for the poor.

"I am a victim of the Traction Trust and the Ice Trust. I know that they are at large and doing business."

There was prolonged applause. Mr. Smith interfered and told Mr. Jerome that it would be necessary to proceed to other questions, and Mr. Jerome followed his direction.

The Tillinghast Bribery Charges.

Mr. Jerome then turned to the Tillinghast jury-bribing case. "This man was brought to my office," said he, "by a man named Julian, a former special agent of the Metropolitan, who had been indicted by Mr. Philbin for perjury. I found out that some things he said were true, but in the majority of the operations which he touched upon he was only the accomplice, and it was necessary to corroborate his testimony. The law is different in some States, but in New York it is not sufficient to get a squealer."

Col. Amory then had his innings. When the applause died down after Mr. Jerome's return to the front of the platform, half of the audience shouted: "Say something! How about it?"

"Mr. Amory's statements are based on the word of a man whom I nailed in an effort to blackmail," he shouted.

"Why didn't you indict him?" came back from the crowd.

"Because I jumped too soon. It was one of the cases where it would have been better to wait a bit."

"Oh-h-h-h! Oh-h-h-h!" hooted a hundred voices.

Here Cronin jumped to his feet again, but Mr. Smith would not allow him to put his question. "You've had your turn already," cried he.

"Hire a hall," shouted a voice, "and give some one else a chance."

Immediately a dozen men were on their feet in different parts of the hall shouting at the top of their lungs and gesticulating wildly. It looked for a moment as if the meeting would break up in a riot. The police pushed their way down the aisles and after warning several men and crowding others down into their seats, order was finally restored.

Jerome's Varied Duties.

A well-dressed young man in the rear of the hall got the floor and shouted: "I want to know, Mr. Jerome, if it is one of the functions of your office to solve all the social, economic, and political questions of the day as well as prosecuting the criminal cases of the county?"

"It seems to be thought so," replied Mr. Jerome quietly, amid the laughter that followed.

Then Cronin got the floor again and succeded this time in being heard. "You say," said he, "that police duty is not one of your functions. How about your conduct in the Tillinghast case, in the Vidaver and Jackson ice trouble, and in the case of this Grand Juror? And at the same time you were lunching with Montgomery, an indicted bank wrecker." He continued off into a flight of oratory, and Mr. Smith shouted: "No speeches from the floor." "Go on!" "Sit down!" shouted the crowd.

"Wait!" cried Mr. Jerome, "I want to answer that. I did lunch with Montgomery, and I will tell you why. He told me that he knew that Vidaver was committing a crime and that he would give me the evidence if I would meet him outside my office. We got Vidaver with marked money. It was a common, ordinary case of a man being caught with the goods."

"Why didn't you try him?" shouted a dozen voices at once.

"Montgomery has been indicted several times," replied Mr. Jerome, "and I can't make up my mind whether I will try him or Vidaver first."

Canard About W. C. Whitney.

"How about the murderer of William C. Whitney?" shouted the next man. This threw the crowd into another uproar, but Mr. Jerome raised his hand and said in deep seriousness: "That scandalous story has been circulated to the effect that Mr. Whitney was killed in a vulgar brawl by a man who is notorious in this city. I heard of it and investigated it carefully, and I believe that any statement that Mr. Whitney's life was taken by his own hand or that of any other than God is untrue."

Here a man sitting in a front-row seat arose and cried: "I am the anonymous reporter to whom you referred in your speech, Mr. Jerome, and I want to make an explanation."

"I sent those questions to you in the name of my chum and roommate, because I did not want to appear. But did you or did you not send Peter Beery to hunt out this man and then through a relative of his inform him that if he did not withdraw the questions, he would be torn to pieces by your office?"

Mr. Jerome smiled and said that he knew nothing of this incident.

"Why did you attend the Croker dinner?" shouted a voice.

Why He Went to the Croker Dinner.

"I attended that dinner," replied Mr. Jerome, "because a long time ago Mr. Croker did me a very great favor. He started me in life by getting me appointed an Assistant District Attorney under Mr. Fellowes. He did this because once my father did him a very great favor. I had been told that it was going to be a small dinner, but I found it a large affair with speech making. I made a speech, and in it I told Mr. Croker that he had never had a political thought with which I agreed, but that I admired him because he is a man who stands by his friends until the cows come home."

As to the statements of Martin W. Littleton in his summing up in the Sulzbacher case with regard to the subsidizing of the District Attorney's office, Mr. Jerome replied that this statement had no foundation in fact.

"Why don't you answer the reporter's question?" cried a voice.

Mr. Jerome whispered a few words to Mr. Smith and then the latter announced that the District Attorney said it would take three-quarters of an hour, and called for the next question.

"How much did De Lancey Nicoll and Paul D. Cravath contribute to your last campaign" a voice asked. "They are counsel for the Metropolitan, aren't they? And do you call that sticking by your friends until the cows come home?"

Amid the laughter that followed Mr. Jerome replied that Mr. Nicoll had contributed nothing, and that Mr. Cravath had subscribed $25.

"I want to know," cried a well-dressed man sitting in the middle of the auditorium, "if we're going to have the happiness of voting for you this Fall, Mr. Jerome?"

The audience immediately broke into hisses and shouts, and above the uproar Mr. Smith was heard shouting, "I rule that question out." Mr. Jerome did not answer, and this ended the meeting.

HOW THE RACE WAS RUN.

Sir Martin Apparently Jostled—Whitney Wins Two Races.

EPSOM, May 26.—Barring the accident to Sir Martin, to-day's Derby was one of the finest ever run on the historic Epsom course. W. Raphael's Louviers, with France's star jockey, Stern, on his back, came under the wire so close an attendant upon Minoru that the spectators were undecided which led until the King's number was displayed on the blackboard.

Lord Michelham's William IV. was a good third, and half a dozen of the fifteen starters were well bunched behind. Only Sir Martin was seen following the field riderless.

The weather conditions were very bad. A sharp shower swept over the country just before the start, and the race was run in a drizzle of rain. The grand stands were filled with raised umbrellas, which seriously impeded the view.

The field of fifteen was sent away to an exceptionally good start. Brooklands made the running from Louviers for the first mile, with the King's colt well placed in fifth position. Approaching Tattenham Corner Minoru improved his position and stalling off close to the homestretch a strong challenge by Louviers he won by the shortest of short heads.

As soon as the horses entered the straight and the crowd recognized that the King's colors were in front, the cheering began. Gradually the enthusiasm spread over the downs and the cheers grew in volume as Minoru neared the judges' box.

The victory was so narrow that there was a moment's wait for the judges' verdict, but when the royal number was hoisted to the top of the board a great roar burst out afresh.

Sir Martin Going Strong.

The American crack, Sir Martin, was going strong, and was well up among the leaders when he came to grief. Brooklands was leading at the approach to Tattenham Corner, with Louviers close up. Sir Martin, Minoru, Bayardo, and Valens formed the second flight. Rounding this dangerous corner Sir Martin was crowded by the other horses, crossed his legs, and fell.

Jockey Martin was badly dazed from the fall, and his forehead was bleeding from a cut where the hoof of one of the other horses had grazed him, but the physicians who examined him said he would be all right in a day or two. The horse was uninjured.

Electric Boy apparently was the horse that crowded the American colt. Louis Winans, his owner, said to-night that it was a regrettable accident, but nothing more. To many Americans at the race track and on both sides of the Atlantic it will seem a calamity, judging from the amount of money, which some estimate at $300,000, that was put up on the Kentucky-bred colt. This large amount placed on Sir Martin sent his price to 3 to 1. On Minoru the betting was 7 to 2, on Louviers 9 to 1, and on William IV. 20 to 1.

The French contingent, which came over to see Stern win on Louviers, showed almost as much disappointment as the Americans.

To Englishmen, even those who had staked their money on some other horse, the King's success was inspiring as a victory in a great international contest, and compensated for the rain which drove across the field, making a wallow of mud under foot.

Breeding of the Winner.

Minoru is a bay colt by Cyllene out of Mother Siegel, and is consequently a high-class animal in the thoroughbred list. Cyllene is sire of Cicero, who won the 1905 Derby for Lord Rosebery.

As a two-year-old Minoru was not much of a success on account of some eye trouble, but he made a few good attempts, showing that he possessed speed and stamina. His work as a three-year-old continued to show improvement until he became favorite in this classic event a few weeks ago.

Richard Croker, who wandered about the paddock alone to-day with his hands in his pockets and a bowler cap drawn over his eyes, must have contrasted the tumult that followed the King's victory with the silence that fell over the stands when he led in Orby II., the winner in 1907. The King entertained sixty members of the Jockey Club at the annual dinner at Buckingham Palace to-night. Reports from all sections tell of enthusiastic scenes when the news of his Majesty's good luck was received.

Two Races for Whitney.

H. P. Whitney made his reappearance on an English course, and his two victories, in the Stewards' Handicap, with Perseus III., and the Epsom Town Plate, with Bobbin II., were well received.

The victory of Perseus III., which was ridden by "Skeets" Martin, the American jockey, was a most popular one. Perseus III. led during the entire last half of the distance and won easily.

The Stewards' Handicap is of 1,000 sovereigns, for three-year-olds, last mile and forty-four yards of the Derby course. L'Ansan was second, and Mustapha was third. Ten horses started.

The Caterham Plate of 200 sovereigns, for two-year-olds, distance five furlongs, was won by Suncloud. Aounha was second and Haggwood third. Among the fourteen starters was H. P. Whitney's Ballyhoo filly.

The Juvenile Selling Plate of 200 sovereigns, for two-year-olds, distance five furlongs, was won by William Penn. Grove was second and the Doris filly third. Among the twelve starters was H. P. Whitney's Belle of Troy filly.

H. P. Whitney scored his second victory for the day when his Bobbin II. defeated a field of eighteen in the Epsom Town Plate of 200 sovereigns, for three-year-olds; distance, six furlongs. Benwhat was second and Freeborn third.

DERBY WINNER, MINORU, AND HIS ROYAL OWNER.

LONDON, May 26.—The news of King Edward's victory at Epsom drew an immense throng to the Victoria Station this afternoon, and when the King and the Queen alighted from the train and made their way to their carriages they met with a memorable reception.

Huge crowds lined the whole route to Buckingham Palace, and repeated enthusiastic cheers testified to the great popularity of the success of the sovereign.

The winning of the Derby by King Edward is a theme of boundless pleasure and enthusiasm, and it is a long time since the morning newspapers have devoted so much space to this popular race.

"We hope," says The Daily Telegraph, "that the royal family of England long will continue to identify themselves, as King Edward so long has done, with the national sports and recreations of the British people. The turf is still the sport of Kings, and the English turf is a splendid, historical institution, well deserving the patronage and support of the highest in the land."

The other newspapers use similar loyal expressions of congratulation and satisfaction over Minoru's victory for King Edward. Sir Martin's misfortune passes practically unnoticed, and is not even mentioned in the editorials, except those of the sporting papers.

Sporting Life says: "What would have happened if no mishap had attended Sir Martin can only be a matter of conjecture, but certainly the interest of the exciting finish would have been heightened, for there is no question that the American colt was going wonderfully well up to the time of the disaster."

The Sportsman has this to say: "It was a most unfortunate occurrence, for, according to the accounts of several of the competing jockeys, Sir Martin was pulling double and going better than anything; in fact, looking all over a winner."

Jockey Martin, in an interview, stated in most emphatic terms that it was impossible to blame anybody for Sir Martin's going down, declaring that it was purely an accident. He added that King Edward's victory was the brightest thing that could have happened.

NEWS RECEIVED EARLY HERE.

Local Interest Died Away When Sir Martin Was Unplaced.

The defeat of Sir Martin in the Derby smothered completely the enthusiasm which the race in prospect had aroused in New York, and turfmen and patriots alike were blankly disappointed, and lost interest in the English classic when the first brief returns were heard, and Sir Martin was not mentioned among the first three horses. The news also reached New York much earlier than was anticipated. The result, Minoru first, Louviers second, and William IV. third, was announced in the rooms of The Jockey Club at 10:12 A. M., and a minute or so later at the principal hotels, where bulletin service for the race had been arranged for.

John E. Madden, the Kentucky horseman who bred and developed Sir Martin, and sold him last Winter to Louis Winans, said:

"In common with every other lover of the turf, I regret that the Derby was not a true run race, in that Sir Martin met with a mishap.

"It is idle to speculate upon which horse would have won had the accident not occurred, and so I want to be among those to sincerely congratulate the King upon his victory. I have already cabled to that effect to his Majesty, who is generally considered the best sportsman in England, so the victory is well placed indeed.

"Not having seen the race, it is impossible for me to discuss it in detail. As the breeder and former owner of Sir Martin I do not hesitate to say that he is a first-class colt, and I have no doubt he will fittingly represent America in the other races in which he is engaged.

"While regretting Sir Martin's misfortune, we must remember that it takes a good horse to win the Derby, and so let us be unqualified in our applause of Minoru and his owner, the King."

There was general gossip yesterday about the losses of Americans who had backed Sir Martin for the Derby, and the estimates of the total ran from $200,000 to a much larger sum. Betting men generally agreed that an immense sum must have been required to back Sir Martin down to the place of post favorite.

Royal Standard Raised at Toronto.

TORONTO, Ontario, May 26.—Official cognizance of his Majesty's great victory in the English Derby was taken to-day by the Ontario Jockey Club, with the hearty co-operation of Earl Grey, the King's Canadian representative. Just before the second race, his Excellency, by megaphone, announced to the assembled throngs on the lawns that the King's horse had won the great Derby. As the announcement was made the royal standard was raised on a new flag pole which had been erected on the inside of the track near the timers' stand, while the band played and the crowd cheered to its heart's content.

AUTHOR SHOOTS INTRUDER.

Who Proved, However, to be Neither Burglar Nor Would-be Assassin.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Conn., May 26.—Residents of South Norwalk are pointing with great pride to-day to Porter Emerson Browne, the playwright, and are talking of a petition to Pittsburg to ask that the Carnegie Hero Commission grant him a medal for bravery in saving the lives of himself and family when a man tried to break into his bungalow at an early hour this morning.

There are several versions of the reason why the intruder wanted to do this, one of the most popular here being that he had seen a recent play of Mr. Browne's and wanted to get even with the author.

Mr. Browne himself, however, in telling of his thrilling experience to-day said nothing about this.

It seems that he, his wife, daughter, and his niece, Miss Genevieve Cliffe, were awakened shortly after 2 o'clock this morning by a strange pounding at the front door of his bungalow. It seemed as though some one was trying to break down a part of the house.

Clad in his pajamas and armed with a candle in one hand and a Colt's revolver in the other, Mr. Browne proceeded to the front door, which he opened just enough to see what the trouble was.

"I saw the most horrible-looking creature I ever looked upon, and he tried to force his way in," said Mr. Browne, "but I was too quick for him and slammed the door in his face. In the meantime Mrs. Browne screamed out of the window to awaken the neighbors and call the police. All the while the man was trying to break in the front door, and I called to him forty times to desist. After threatening to shoot him eight distinct times, I fired through the upper part of the door to scare him. But he would not quit. Then I determined to show him that I meant business and fired through the lower part of the door.

"When the police force arrived from South Norwalk I opened the door and found that I had shot the man in the leg."

The police trundled the raving man into a delivery wagon in which they had ridden to the scene and took him to the Norwalk Hospital. They said he had delirium tremens in addition to the bullet wound in his leg.

Mr. Browne went to the police station later in the day and lodged a complaint of disorderly conduct against the man, who said he was William De Foy of Waterville, Conn. Mr. Browne's explanation of the shooting satisfied the police.

NEW TELESCOPE FOR LOWELL.

Forty-two-Inch Instrument Completing for Flagstaff Work on Mars.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 26.—The Alvan Clark Corporation is just completing for the Flagstaff Observatory of Prof. Percival Lowell a reflecting telescope of forty-two inches aperture for photographing Mars and other planets.

The form of telescope is that known as Cassegrainian, the rays collected by the large mirror being reflected to a small mirror in the mouth of the telescope and thence down the tube again to a small plane mirror, which sends them out through the side of the tube near the bottom. Here will be the plate holders, or other apparatus for taking and recording the observations.

With this instrument, supplemented by the experience of his assistant, Dr. Slipner, Prof. Lowell will be well prepared to make the most of the coming opposition of Mars and follow out the lead that his observatory has already taken in the delicate and difficult work of photographing the planets.

CARNEGIE IS MODEST ABOUT $1,000,000 GIFT

GETS MEDAL AT SORBONNE

In Recognition of His Foundation of Curie Scholarships—President Fallieres Chats with Him Informally.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 26.—Andrew Carnegie was a trifle chagrined when told today that it was no longer a secret that he had given $1,000,000 for the establishment of a hero fund for France. He had hope to get away before the fact became known. However, as he leaves to-morrow for England, he will not be subjected to embarrassing thanks, though it is certain that France will be warmly grateful when it learns of his act.

Mr. Carnegie had had the plan under consideration for some time. At his last visit to the home of Ambassador White, Mr. Carnegie broached it, asking whether the gift would be acceptable. Subsequently the matter was placed in Mr. White's hands. Mr. Carnegie speaks with especial appreciation of the skill with which the Ambassador perfected the arrangements.

The fund is $1,000,000 in 5 per cent. United States Steel Corporation bonds, the beneficiaries men and women pursuing peaceful vocations who perform heroic deeds in France or the territorial waters thereof, or the widows and other dependents of those killed in the performance of heroic acts. Doctors, nurses, sailors, railway men, and police are especially mentioned.

The fund is to be managed by a commission of twenty-five now being formed by Premier Clemenceau. Among those who have agreed to serve are the only living ex-President, Emil Loubet; two former Premiers, Léon Bourgeois and Alexandre Ribot; Baron Alphonse De Courcel, ex-Minister to Berlin and London, now Senator; Jules Siegfried, Deputy for Havre and a noted economist; Abbé Lemire, a Catholic Deputy and specially interested in working men; Pastor Wagner, well-known in America as the author of "The Simple Life," and Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, a Senator equally well known as an apostle of universal peace. The conditions of the trust are the same as in the United States and Canada and in Great Britain.

Nothing was known of Mr. Carnegie's gift at the council of the University of Paris, otherwise the Sorbonne, which assembled especially in his honor today, when Mr. Carnegie was presented with a medal struck for him. He made a moving speech in reply. Ambassador White also eulogized him at the breakfast which followed the council, as the first American Ambassador entertained at the Sorbonne. This afternoon he was received by President Fallieres, who engaged in the most friendly conversation with the ironmaster, remarking that his father had been a blacksmith.

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant's dinner to Mr. Carnegie to-night was an assembly of distinguished Frenchmen, and included also Ambassador and Mrs. White, Mme. Loubet, and Prince Albert of Monaco.

PARIS, May 26.—The Council of the Sorbonne, in solemn session to-day, conferred upon Andrew Carnegie a medal in recognition of his founding the Curie scholarships in 1906.

The entire Faculty of the college was present, and the only outside guests were Mme. Curie, widow of the scientist; Ambassador White, Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, and M. Niot, President of the French Salon.

M. Liard, vice rector of the college, made the speech of presentation. He thanked Mr. Carnegie not only for his gift to the Sorbonne, but for his widespread benefactions to science and learning, and he extolled especially the philanthropist's example in expounding and practicing "the philosophy of the expenditure of riches for the general good."

Mr. Carnegie replied in English. He said he had always felt that his aims were better understood here than elsewhere. Pasteur was one of his heroes. Napoleon had earned the gratitude of thinking men, not by his exploits in war, but by the reorganization of France after the revolution and the establishment of the University of France.

Discussing American universities, Mr. Carnegie said that the professors in these institutions typified the honor of America, and were becoming more and more the leaders of public opinion. He was especially proud that America was now devoting much time to research, which meant the world's progress, and extolled the part France was playing in the international peace movement.

"Contrast the building of warships destined for murderous destruction," he exclaimed, "with the Sorbonne's discoveries for peace."

The United States and France would continue to stand side by side on this question, declared Mr. Carnegie, whatever happened.

"France and Scotland also have been friends for ages," said Mr. Carnegie in conclusion, "and although my native land is Scotland and my adopted country America I feel that I am the natural friend of France, almost a Frenchman."

After the presentation there was a luncheon at which Ambassador White responded on behalf of the United States.

NEW AUSTRALIAN REFORMS.

Heavy Taxes on Unimproved Land—Nationalization of Monopolies.

MELBOURNE, May 26.—The Federal Parliament was opened to-day. The Earl of Dudley, Governor General of Australia, announced the introduction of legislation providing for the progressive taxation of unimproved land, with the object of breaking up large estates and offering to immigrants the inducements necessary to attract them in large numbers.

Proposals are to be submitted also amending the Constitution to enable Parliament to protect the interests of the consumer while insuring a fair wage to every worker; to extend the jurisdiction of the Legislature with regard to trusts and combinations, and to provide for the nationalization of monopolies.

Miss Harley Defeats Miss Curtis.

WATERTOWN, Mass., May 26.—Maintaining the marvelous long game which was the feature of her play last year, Miss Kate C. Harley of Fall River, the National women's golf champion, easily defeated Miss Margaret Curtis of the Country Club, Brookline, the 1907 title holder, six up and four to play, in the first match-play round of the Boston women's golf championship, on the links of the Oakley Country Club to-day. The other winners to-day were Mrs. G. W. Roope of Brae Burn, Miss Alice Underwood of Oakley, and Miss Mary B. Adams of Wollaston. Miss Harley will play Mrs. Roope in the semi-finals to-morrow.

Admiral Potter's Name Sent to Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—President Taft to-day sent to the Senate the nomination of Rear Admiral William P. Potter to be Chief of the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department. The selection of Admiral Potter for this duty was announced some time ago.

LONG ATTACKS ROOSEVELT.

Says the Effect of the Big Hunt Is to Brutalize Boys.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 26.—Dr. William J. Long, the former minister and nature writer, some of whose writings were bitterly attacked by Theodore Roosevelt when he was President, was interviewed to-day about Mr. Roosevelt's hunting trip.

"As there are no reporters with Mr. Roosevelt," said he, "these reports of frequent killings must come chiefly from himself, and are such as he himself chooses to send out. If they are true, they are exactly in line with his previous record. They prove what I said two years ago, quoting from his own books, that he is a game butcher pure and simple, and that his interest in animals lies chiefly in the direction of blood and brutality.

"You remember that when he made terms with the Smithsonian Institution his published letter said: 'Of course I am not a game butcher,' but he immediately reserved for himself the right to do all the killing on the expedition. This is characteristic of his alleged scientific attitude. Matthew Arnold declared that 'Conduct is three-fourths of life,' and Mr. Roosevelt adds that 'butchery is three-fourths of science.'

"The worst feature in the whole bloody business is not the killing of a few hundred wild animals in Africa, but the brutalizing influence which these reports have upon thousands of American boys. Only last week I met half a dozen little fellows in the woods. The biggest boy had a gun and a squirrel's tail in his hat, and he called himself Bwana Tumbo. They were shooting everything in sight, killing birds at a time when every dead mother meant a nestful of young birds slowly starving to death.

"How could I convince them that their work was inhuman? Is not the great American hero occupied at this time with the same detestable business? And why should not they also be heroic and make a few fine shots, and content themselves with robins and rabbits since faunal naturalists and other game butchers have killed off all our buffaloes?"

ROOSEVELT PARTY AT NAIROBI.

All in Good Health—Naturalists Have Many Specimens.

NAIROBI, May 26.—All the members of the Roosevelt party came into Nairobi this afternoon from the Heatley ranch. They are sunburned, and appear to be in excellent health. In the last hunting Mr. Roosevelt bagged another buffalo, and a big bull wildbeeste fell before the rifle of his son Kermit.

The naturalists of the expedition have collected two pythons and four hundred odd birds and mammals. They are especially delighted with some unexpected specimens.

To-morrow Mr. Roosevelt will be the guest of F. J. Jackson, Acting Governor of the Protectorate. For the remainder of his stay here he will occupy George McMillan's town house, loaned for the occasion. The naturalists of the party, together with R. J. Cunninghame, who has charge of the expedition, will stop at the Norfolk Hotel.

The party will leave here next week for the Sotik district, via Rijabe, and will not return here before the end of July. A public banquet will be tendered to Mr. Roosevelt in Nairobi about Aug. 1. The expedition will be accompanied to the Sotik country by L. J. Tarlton.

Gov. Jackson has issued invitations to a reception to meet Mr. Roosevelt Thursday night, and he will entertain the former President at dinner on Saturday. After this dinner Mr. Roosevelt will attend an amateur theatrical entertainment.

ROOSEVELT HUNT DISAPPROVED.

Humane Societies Refuse Thanks for His Efforts to Protect Birds.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., May 26.—Because Theodore Roosevelt is engaged in killing wild animals in Africa, the Michigan Convention of Humane Societies, in session here yesterday, rejected by an overwhelming majority a resolution thanking the ex-President for his aid in protecting Michigan birds.

During the Roosevelt Administration certain islands in Lakes Huron and Superior were set aside as "protected districts."

TAFT ON NEGROES' FUTURE.

Says It Is in Their Own Hands in Speech at Howard.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Speaking to the colored graduates of Howard University, in this city, to-day, President Taft declared that never at any time has the future of the negro, as a race, appeared more hopeful and bright than at the present day.

The President, however, impressed the view upon his hearers that it is for the negroes themselves to work out their own future, and to make themselves valuable citizens in the communities in which they live. Conditions for the negro in the South, the President said he believed were growing better and better. Southern people of the better class were coming to look more and more upon the negro race as one of their most valuable assets, Mr. Taft declared, and he urged upon the negro the importance of gaining the respect and the friendship of the white people among whom he is to live.

The task of educating the negro, and especially of educating the leaders among the race, the President asserted was a debt owed by the Government, a debt only too difficult of repayment because of the constitutional limits of the Government in dealing with the individual.

President Taft personally handed to the more than 100 candidates for degrees their parchment rolls. When the commencement exercises were ended he was escorted to the foundation of the new Carnegie Library of the institution, where he officiated at the laying of the corner-stone.

The President evidently enjoyed being a real mason, for he not only applied the customary first dash of mortar, but worked industriously with the silver trowel until he had covered the entire resting place for the stone.

ENGLISH NAVY PLAN DISREGARDS AMERICA

Asquith Tells Commons Distance Makes Inclusion in Two-Power Standard Unnecessary.

FLEET'S VOYAGE OBJECTION

Arthur Lee Says 40,000-Mile Cruise of the Battleships Destroys the Argument of Safety in Distance.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 26.—In the House of Commons to-night Premier Asquith definitively laid down the view of the British Government in regard to the question whether the United States should be considered in determining the British two-power naval standard.

Mr. Asquith said that a great deal of nonsense had been talked about the two-power standard, which was, in fact, nothing more than a purely empirical generalization. He agreed that the range of British vision should not be limited to Europe, but, on the other hand, when considering the combined effective strength of any other two powers of the world for aggressive purposes, one must, he said, have regard to geographical position.

In dealing with a remote power whose naval base was 6,000, 8,000, or 10,000 miles away, with no convenient coaling stations, it was elementary common sense not to treat that power as of the same effective value as a power with a naval base a hundred miles or so away. Therefore, pursued Mr. Asquith, the United States could not be regarded as one of the two powers which would have to be taken into account, for, although the United States was the second among the naval powers of the world, she could not be treated as of the same efficiency for aggressive purposes toward England as France, Germany or Austria.

Arthur Lee objected to the Premier's view, saying he would deal with the probability of any war with America merely as an academic proposition.

"It is really impossible to exclude America on the score of geographical remoteness," said Mr. Lee, "when she has just sent a fleet of sixteen first-class battleships, maintained as a fighting entity throughout, for a voyage of 40,000 miles, in the course of which that fleet circumnavigated the globe and visited many parts of the British Empire."

Mr. Balfour, without mentioning the United States, argued that Mr. Asquith had abandoned the traditional British view of the two-power standard, but the House rejected by a majority of 114 a motion embodying Mr. Balfour's criticism.

The American Church on Trial

Is the influence of the church diminishing or growing stronger?

"Men have lost much of their old confidence in their courts, their prisons, their public institutions and their public officials. Are they to lose confidence also in their churches?" This is the question that Hugh C. Weir takes up in the first of two strong articles on the present condition of the church in America. Mr. Weir is a brilliant writer as well as a thorough student. His assertions may be startling but they are convincing as well.

The June Putnam's has, besides, five entertaining stories, as many excellent articles (including Madame Emma Eames' Valedictory—a farewell word to the American public), a quantity of good illustrations, and many other attractive features. TAFT OUSTS NORTH FROM CENSUS BUREAU

Director Resigns Because of Feud with Secretary Nagel—E. Dana Durand Named as Successor.

CHARGED WITH LOBBYING

Accusation Also Made That North Was Ignorant of the Technical Work of His Department.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—S. N. D. North, Director of the Census, resigned to-day. He is to be succeeded by E. Dana Durand, now Deputy Commissioner of Corporations in the Department of Commerce and Labor. The name of Mr. Durand was sent to the Senate to-day for confirmation. It is not believed there will be any opposition to him.

Mr. North's resignation was forced by reason of the feud that developed between him and Secretary Nagel over the question of authority. He had powerful friends in Congress, and it was believed this influence was great enough to preserve him in his place. Among his most powerful champions were Senators Aldrich, Crane, and Lodge, but these three were sent for last night by the President and told that their protégé must retire. Mr. North's resignation followed this morning.

Shortly after his letter was made public at the White House, Mr. North gave out a statement setting forth the reasons for his action. His chief reason was because of the events of the last few weeks he had become convinced there was no chance of securing the close co-operation of the Department of Commerce and Labor necessary to make the work of the Census Bureau effective. He admitted that he already had made a business arrangement, the nature of which he will announce later on.

The friction in the department began when Mr. North drew up contracts and prepared advertisements for bids for tabulating machines without consulting Secretary Nagel. He merely presented the papers to the Secretary for his formal action, and Mr. Nagel promptly laid the matter before the President, protesting against the manner in which he was being ignored.

The President immediately had Mr. North up before him. The Director insisted that he meant no discourtesy nor intended to be insubordinate in the least. He sought to excuse his action by the declaration that the time before the taking of the next census was so short he believed he could hurry matters by pursuing the course he had taken. His explanation did not satisfy either the President or Secretary Nagel.

It was also declared the Director had been guilty of lobbying before Congress; appointing friends of Congressmen to places in the bureau; ignorance of the technical work of the bureau, and using his appointive power for his personal benefit rather than for the good of the Government service.

Mr. Durand, the new Director, is 38 years old. He was born in Michigan and is well known as an expert statistician and an authority on finance. Mr. Durand was an instructor in economics in Harvard in 1902, when he entered the Census Bureau. He remained in the bureau until 1907, when he was appointed Deputy Commissioner of Corporations. As soon as he is confirmed by the Senate he will take up his new duties.

AERO CARNIVAL LOW DOWN.

Even Capt. Baldwin's Airship Doesn't Attempt a Lofty Flight.

Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin gave the 100-acre collection of big and little shows and broad home site possibilities at North Arlington, N. J., its saving flavor of an aero carnival yesterday by making a late ascension with his 86-foot dirigible balloon.

Since the first ascension on the opening day he has worked out the balancing properties of the airship to his satisfaction, but owing to the gusty winds he announced to the impatient throng that he intended to take no chances, and it was 7 o'clock before the whirring of the motor intimated that the aeronaut meant business.

Meanwhile the crowd of 2,000 persons who roamed about the grounds earlier in the day, eating peanuts and sampling lemonade, dwindled perceptibly, so that when the airship was ready to soar barely 500 enthusiasts remained loyal to the aeronautic sights of the carnival.

Capt. Baldwin did much better than on the preceding day, for he remained aloft nearly ten minutes, circling around his big tent and covering probably 1,000 feet. He kept within a 200-foot radius, and did not venture to sail over the grove of trees to the east.

"A balloon on the ground is a great thing for the show business," said one of the Orientally garbed fortune-telling women, as she predicted for the twentieth time to an anxious 10-cent client that in twelve months or less the citizens of West Hudson would enjoy the pleasure of sailing by an aeroplane rapid transit service direct to New York. "I could prophesy bigger things," she added confidentially, "if the price were bigger."

LICENSES FOR JAPANESE.

Corporation Counsel Spoils an International "Incident" by Favoring Them

Another international "incident" was spoiled yesterday when Corporation Counsel Pendleton settled the Japanese question again. It had occurred to Francis V. Oliver, Jr., chief of the Bureau of Licenses, that the section of the Code of Ordinances which declares that no hawker's or peddler's license shall be granted to any one who is not a citizen of the United States, "or who has not regularly declared his intention of becoming a citizen," might prohibit him from renewing certain outstanding licenses to Japanese on which applications for continuance had been presented to his office.

He asked Mr. Pendleton for an opinion, which was given yesterday. Many court decisions are cited to the general effect that there is no good reason why the license applications from Japanese should not be granted. Mr. Pendleton declares that as the courts have decided that a native of Japan is not entitled to naturalization "any declaration of intention of becoming a citizen would be an idle and useless act, and would confer on him no additional rights."

He further declares that the treaty between the United States and Japan granting protection and the rights of trade to the citizens of each country in the territory of the other "is the supreme law of the land."

SORRY WATCHORN HAD TO GO.

Presbyterians Deplore His Removal—Little Worship in Homes.

DENVER, May 26.—A resolution deploring the removal of Robert Watchorn as Commissioner of Immigration at Ellis Island, N. Y., was adopted by the Presbyterian General Assembly to-day.

Dr. George B. Stewart, President of the Auburn Theological Seminary, presented the report of the Educational Committee. He pointed out the lack of religious training in the home and said the need was not so much for money as for missionaries with a careful home training.

A resolution beginning: "Whereas, family worship is a thing of the past," caused a commotion. It had been offered by Dr. James P. Frazer of Baltimore, and called upon pastors to organize more efficient Sunday school work. Half a dozen Commissioners were on their feet demanding to know if the Church was to go on record in such fashion. Dr. Roberts, the Stated Clerk, made a quick correction, using the word "neglected," and trouble was avoided.

SLASHED IN A CAR.

Women Trampled On, Men Cut with Knives by 3 Negroes—One Caught.

Three negroes chose the interior of a Lexington Avenue electric car for a knife fight among themselves last night. In the fight several women were struck by the negroes, and two white men were slashed with their knives. Other women fainted, and one or two were trampled on when the negroes tried to escape.

The names of the women were not obtained by the police. The white men injured in attempting to subdue the negroes were Joseph Sullivan of 1,204 Second Avenue and John Bolling of 445 East Seventy-seventh Street. Although slashed in several places they gave chase, and through their efforts a negro whom they declared to be one of the three assailants was captured after an exciting race, in which a policeman used his revolver. The fugitive was tripped and thrown by a club thrown at him by an officer.

The negroes boarded the car at 117th Street. Before it reached 116th Street they had drawn knives and attacked each other. Sullivan and Bolling stepped between the fighting men and the nearest women to protect them, and in turn were attacked. Sullivan was slashed across the face and right hand and Bolling across the left hand and side. Then the negroes began to fight their way to the rear door. Two reached the rear platform and knocked down the conductor, George Robinson, who sought to stop them.

Sullivan and Bolling, despite their injuries, seized the third negro and threw him on the floor of the car. The negro, however, slashed right and left with his knife and, regaining his feet, fought his way to the front door. The motorman tried to seize him, but missed, and he fled southward, Sullivan and Bolling following.

Policeman McKenna took up the pursuit, and after calling on the man to stop fired over his head. Policeman Feller used his nightstick better, throwing it so that it fell between the negro's legs and tripped him. Before he could rise Policemen Feller, McKenna, and several other men secured him.

In leading him to the East 104th Street Station the police were forced to defend him from the crowd with their clubs. He said he was Richard Robinson of 213 East Eighty-eighth Street. He was locked up charged with felonious assault.

KING'S PALACE ONCE HIS HOME

But Lund Died Here in a Lower West Side Tenement.

The lower west side, whose time-worn apaments and dingy dwellings are the refuge of so many broken fortunes, rehearsed last night the story of a life of unusual vicissitude. The man whose strange biography was thus discussed was Lorenzo Andress Waldemar Lund, a deaf old man, who for the last ten years has been living with his daughter, Mrs. Carl Beyer, on one of the upper floors of 148 West Tenth Street. He died last Monday at that place at the age of 82.

Lund, so the story he told his children and they told in turn last night was the son of Wilhelm Lund, who, three quarters of a century ago, belonged to the bodyguard of Christian IX. of Denmark. He was brought up in the Frederiksborg Palace, where his father was stationed, he himself being the eldest son. As a young man wandering about the corridors of the big palace he was sometimes passed by the Princess Alexandra, the small daughter of the King and the present Queen of England. He was occasionally seized upon by her and asked to play some childish game.

On reaching his majority he left the palace and entered the Danish Army, serving through the Schleswig-Holstein campaign and reaching the rank of Sub-Lieutenant before he was discharged. He then invested his money in a lace factory, doing business in Germany and Sweden until he invented a process of combining ivory and gold in the making of studs and buttons.

The headquarters of this enterprise were in London, with branches at Paris and Birmingham. He became involved in a seven years' lawsuit regarding the patent rights and came out of it ruined. He lost his wife, an Englishwoman named Jane Watson, about this time, and in 1883 came to this city. While here he invented and manufactured a necktie and button fostener. But the patents expired and he became afflicted with deafness, and came to spend his old age quietly with his children on the lower west side.

CONEY ISLAND COURT TEST.

Four Owners of Small Resorts Arrested for Sunday Law Violations.

The secrecy of the Coney Island police as to the identity of the four amusement vendors against whom warrants had been issued on Monday for violation of the Sunday law, was lifted yesterday when the men appeared before Magistrate Tighe in the Coney Island Court. They were James Cavanaugh, proprietor of an "Aunt Sally" stand on the Bowery; Albert Rycoff, manager of a "Double Whirl," also on the Bowery; Thomas Devers, owner of a shooting gallery on Surf Avenue, and Frederick Fahm, a moving-picture man at Henderson's Walk and the Bowery.

On the application of Assistant Corporation Counsel Hahlo, who said he had not had time to go into the matter, the court adjourned the hearing until to-morrow, paroling the defendants in the custody of counsel.

It was commented on that the four men selected to make a test case were all in a comparatively small way of business, and it was said that they were picked in the hope that they would not be able to put up much of a fight. But if this was the case the police reckoning was wrong, for the men were represented by Louis Karasik, counsel for the newly formed Coney Island Protective League; Henry M. Cummings, and Owen F. Finnerty. It was said that if the decision is against them the case will be taken to the highest court.

Another phase of the situation was taken up yesterday before Justice Jaycox, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, when Gustavus A. Rogers, counsel for a number of moving picture show proprietors, applied for a permanent injunction restraining Mayor McClellan from interfering with the lawful exhibition of moving pictures on the Sabbath. Mr. Hahlo appeared to oppose the application, and Justice Jaycox gave counsel until this afternoon to submit briefs.

CHAUFFEUR DARRAGH'S TRIAL.

His Companion in Auto Missing—Jail and Fine for Another Speeder.

The trial of William Darragh, a chauffeur, of 417 West 118th Street, for running down and killing Ingevaard Trimble, the 13-year-old son of Robert J. Trimble, of Covington, Ky., in Morningside Avenue, near 117th Street, on March 27, was started yesterday before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions. The indictment was one for murder in the first degree, being the most severe ever found against a speeding chauffeur.

Edward F. Flammer, counsel for Darragh, said he had tried to get a certain witness, who was in the car with Darragh, but had been unable to do so. Assistant District Attorney Smyth said the witness would be quite as valuable to his side of the case as to the defence, and promised to send a policeman with a subpoena after him.

Robert J. Trimble, the boy's father, and Dr. Lyon of St. Luke's Hospital, the first witnesses called, described the boy's identity and the nature of his injuries. Donald C. McLean, a school teacher, and William Downing, testified to the high speed of the car at the time it struck the boy.

Immediately after the accident Darragh fled to Port Arthur, Tex., where he was arrested two weeks later.

COL. GORGAS ON A VACATION.

Praises Health Conditions in the Canal Zone—178 Employes Here, Too.

Col. W. C. Gorgas, head of the sanitation work in the Canal Zone, his wife, and daughter, Aileen, were passengers on the Panama liner Panama arriving yesterday. The Colonel and his family are on their way to Alabama to spend a two months' vacation.

"Health conditions on the Isthmus are of the best," said Col. Gorgas. "There is neither yellow fever nor plague in the Canal Zone, although there is some malaria. Many a great undertaking has been carried on under conditions more favorable than the zone, but with a heavier death rate. Work on the canal is progressing rapidly."

Besides Col. Gorgas there arrived on the Panama 178 canal employes, home on vacation.

WHOLESALE CHANGES IN CONSULAR SERVICE

Twenty-seven Transfers and 23 New Appointments Announced by Knox.

GRIFFITHS GOES TO LONDON

Wynne Returns Home—More Changes Expected—Merit System Rules—Special Attention to Eastern Posts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Secretary of State Knox took the first step to-day in his plan for a general shaking up of the Consular Service. He made public a list of fifty changes, twenty-seven of these being transfers and promotions, and twenty-three being appointments of new men. These changes are to be followed presently by further shiftings of American representatives abroad, but the department refuses to divulge whether any important stations are involved.

The most important in to-day's list of changes was the appointment of John L. Griffiths of Indiana, at present Consul in Liverpool, to be Consul General in London in place of Robert J. Wynne. Mr. Wynne was not removed, but the State Department accepted his resignation when he expressed a desire to return to the United States and engage in business. The change will be made as quickly as possible. Horace Lee Washington, now Consul General at Marseilles, will succeed Mr. Griffiths in Liverpool.

Mr. Wynne first came into public notice when he assisted in running down the Post Office frauds. He showed such an aptitude for the work that President Roosevelt made him Postmaster General, afterward sending him to London as Consul General.

The following list includes some other of the more important of the transfers and new appointments announced to-day:

CHARLES M. CAUGHEY of Maryland, from Consul at Malaga to Consul at Milan, Italy.

CARL F. DEICHMAN of Missouri, from Consul at Tamsui to Consul at Nagasaki.

JAMES E. DUNNING of Maine, from Consul at Milan to Consul at Havre.

ALPHONSE GAULIN of Rhode Island, from Consul at Havre to Consul General at Marseilles.

AUGUSTUS E. INGRAM, from Consular Assistant to Consul at Bradford, England.

WILL L. LOWRIE of Illinois, from Consul at Erfurt, Germany, to Consul at Carlsbad.

THOMAS P. MOFFATT of New York, from Consul at Trinidad to Bluefields, Nicaragua.

RALPH C. BUSSER of Pennsylvania, Consul at Erfurt, Germany.

H. M. BYINGTON of Connecticut, from Consular Assistant to Consul at Bristol, England.

BENJAMIN F. CHASE of Pennsylvania, Consul at Leeds, England.

STUART J. FULLER of Wisconsin, Consul at Gothenburg, Sweden.

CHARLES A. HOLDER of Colorado, Consul at Rouen, France.

CHARLES L. HOOVER of Philippine Islands, Consul at Madrid.

CHARLES K. MOSER of Virginia, Consul at Aden, Arabia.

GEORGE H. SCIDMORE of Wisconsin, from Consul at Nagasaki, Japan, to Consul at Kobe.

HUNTER SHARP of North Carolina, from Moscow to Consul at Lyons.

JOHN H. SNODGRASS of West Virginia, from Consul at Kobe to Consul General at Moscow.

GEBHARD WILLRICH of Wisconsin, from Consul at St. John, N. B., to Consul at Quebec.

ALBERT W. ROBERT of Florida, Consul at Algiers, Algeria.

FEDERICK SIMPICH of Washington, Consul at Bagdad, Turkey.

Secretary Knox said all the changes among the present officers were promotions, and that all the new appointments were based on the merit system following the regular Consular examinations.

The Taft Administration is determined to put the Consular Service on a business basis, and it is announced that hereafter the merit system will rule absolutely. There is considerable trepidation in a number of Consulates, for the President has declared that useless timber must go. Especial care will be taken in the selection of the Consuls in the Orient, for this part of the globe is considered as holding out bright promise of rapidly increasing trade, and the necessity for an active, thoroughly trained corps of commercial representatives there is recognized.

Neither at the White House nor at the State Department could anything be learned of the report that William Nelson Cromwell is to be offered the post of Minister to China, which was refused only a day or so ago by John Hays Hammond. Secretary Knox declined to discuss the rumor, adding that the search for a suitable man was being prosecuted.

WANTS SUGAR PROTECTED.

Senator McEnery Says Removal of Duty Will Ruin the Industry Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Senate's second day on the sugar schedule of the Tariff bill saw absolutely no progress, and it is possible that no vote will be reached even to-morrow. The committee hopes to reach the tobacco schedule by Friday. In the face of the pointed attacks made on the committee provisions to-day and yesterday by the insurgents Senator Aldrich will probably come to the rescue of the Dutch standard of classification to-morrow, while Senators Clay, Bristow, and others are expected to make long replies to his defense.

The point of contention in the debate is the use of "No. 16 Dutch standard" as the dividing line between the sugars taxed at a rate ranging upward from 95-100 of a cent a pound and the refined sugars and high Dutch gradings at a rate of 1.91 cents a pound.

Mr. McEnery of Louisiana in his speech to-day said:

"I do not base my plea for a duty on sugar for the great revenue it brings. I put it on a higher plane, which is the necessity for the country to become independent of any foreign Government for things it requires. Break down the tariff on sugar and this country will be overrun with sugar from Europe, both refined and granulated, and it will stop every beet sugar factory in the United States and stop the culture of cane in the State of Louisiana.

If the Sugar Trust, he said, had violated the law the guilty men should be put in the penitentiary. "But why crucify the people to bring down vengeance on the Sugar Trust?" he asked.

Senator Bristow devoted himself to the subject of classification to-day, and he argued that through the retention of the obsolete Dutch standard of classification by colors instead of by the modern polariscopic test of purity, the importations of unrefined sugars are limited to grades that must be whitened by the trust before they can be sold.

The Dutch standard is a classification by color and the contention of pure food expert, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, is that the standard is antiquated and shows nothing of the real purity of the sugar. The effect of the grading is that only sugars below No. 16 can pay the duty, and these lower grades are so dark in color and so unpalatable looking that purchasers will not buy them for table or kitchen use.

The grades above No. 16 are subject to the same tax as refined sugar, and, though these grades under a lower duty were largely used for cooking and preserving formerly, they are now excluded by being put under the same duty as the refined article. The effect of this "classification joker," argue the insurgents, is to let into the country only such raw sugar as will make additional business for the trust. Senator Bristow led the fight against the committee, and he was supported by Mr. Clay of Georgia. Senators Smoot and Burrows defended the rates, and Mr. Smoot said this afternoon that the committee would make no concession to the insurgents on this schedule, as they are sure of enough votes.

TO PUSH EXPRESS INQUIRY.

Rate Charges Include Canadian Firms —Attorney General May Act.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—A thorough investigation is to be undertaken by the Inter-State Commerce Commission into the business relations existing between the various express companies and their general operations. It is announced that the hearing of charges, filed with the commission by State Senator Bergt E. Sundberg of Minneapolis, may be had in June.

Senator Sundberg charges that the alleged conspiracy between the companies in the United States extends across the Canadian border. The companies named are the Adams, American, United States, Wells-Fargo, Great Northern, Long Island, New York and Boston Dispatch, Northern Pacific, Southern and Western, and West Jersey. The Canadian concerns specified are the Canadian Northern, Dominion, Earl & Prew, Globe, and National Newfoundland.

All of the companies are charged with violating the inter-State commerce law in various ways. The principal charge, however, is that they are maintaining a uniform agreement "without competition and in violation of the law; that the rates are arbitrary and arbitrarily made and oppressively enforced without regard to the costs of service rendered or the value of investment and equipment employed."

The taking of testimony in the case against the companies probably will be in St. Paul. If an agreement in restraint of trade is found to exist it is altogether probable that the Department of Justice will be drawn into the affair and a general prosecution of all the companies affected be undertaken.

"The commission does not undertake the investigation or punishment of offenses against the Sherman anti-trust law," explained Commissioner Lane to-day, "but if we discover proof that such offenses have been committed we will turn it over to the Attorney General. That has been the procedure in the past and I see no reason why it should not be done in this instance."

All the express companies enter denials of the charges made. They set forth that they are not operating their business in collusion with each other; that no rate agreement exists; that they have observed the law to the letter, by filing with the commission their tariff sheets and charges and that the returns from their investments are not exorbitant.

The editor of a leading hat publication wrote to WILLIAM C. FREEMAN, author of the "ADVERTISING TALKS," printed daily on the first page of THE EVENING MAIL, protesting against BRILL BROTHERS advertising STRAW HATS AT CUT PRICES before the season has commenced.

In his letter to MR. FREEMAN he said in part:

"The cutting of straw-hat prices immediately after the Fourth of July has been a constantly increasing menace to the straw-hat business among the retail trade, and now to see a thoroughly representative and supposedly intelligent house like Brill Brothers coming out on May 20 with the advertisement to which I refer is certainly a sad sight and one that does not promise well for the Spring and Summer business of the men's hat retailers."

Right here Brill Brothers want to say that they WILL NOT be dictated to as to what price they shall ask for their goods. We bought the straw hats underprice, 12,000 of them, and we are going to give our customers the benefit by taking for ourselves only a legitimate profit, and if our competitors feel sore we cannot help it.

They had the same opportunity and they can do likewise next season, if they are able to use 12,000 straw hats in one sale.

BRILL BROTHERS sent their HAT BUYER to both the editor of the trade paper and to MR. FREEMAN to show the hats and to give all the facts about the transaction.

MR. FREEMAN, replying to the editor of the hat publication in a letter, which is too long to print here, wrote this:

"Mr. Glanzrock, Brill Brothers' hat buyer, was in my office when I dictated this letter. He told me that he did not buy last Fall the usual stock for this Summer's trade, and that the latter part of April he decided that he did not have enough straw hats for this season's trade.

"He visited a number of manufacturers in Baltimore and finally called on a firm who said they had a pretty big stock which they were willing to split up between Brill Brothers and other concerns. Mr. Glanzrock was favorably impressed with the stock and bought it. He paid for the stock a price per dozen which enables him to sell the hats at prices quoted in their advertisement, still giving to the firm of Brill Brothers a good, legitimate profit.

"I have seen the hats, the various styles were exhibited in my office, and they not only impressed me, but they impressed many of the people in the office with me.

"I don't know very much about hats, but I do know that the $1.95 hat shown to me is as good as any $3 to $5 hat I ever saw."

Mr. Freeman also states in his letter:

"The only criticism I made is that Brill Brothers did not say in their advertisements what their hat buyer has said to me, i. e., take the public into their confidence, as he has taken me into his confidence. This is the kind of advertising I am preaching for."

The following is the gist of the advertisement that the editor of the hat publication complains of, but it is AN ADVERTISEMENT THAT SAVES MONEY FOR EVERY MAN WHO HAS A STRAW HAT TO BUY:

Straw Hat Sale

Straw Hats at About Half Price

These hats are from one of the best makers in Baltimore, the home of the finest straw hats. Most of these hats were intended to retail at $3 and $4. All were made for Summer 1909. There are over 30 diffent shapes to become every face, in all sizes from 6⅜ to 7⅝.

Brill stores bought these hats underprice because they agreed with this maker to buy his surplus stock, his over-orders, his samples and hats cancelled by jobbers and retailers.

Brill stores sell these hats to you as they bought them—WAY UNDER PRICE.

Now, at the very beginning of the season, just when you want a new straw hat, this Brill sale SAVES YOU ACTUAL CASH.

Straw Hats, $1.50 Grade, Sale Price,	95c
Straw Hats, $2 & $2.50 Grades, Sale Price,	$1.40
Straw Hats, $3, $4 & $5 Grades, Sale Price,	$1.95

This is the first time that any concern anywhere right at the season's beginning ever offered so great a quantity of strictly high-grade straw hats underprice. Straw hat prices are maintained—often by agreement among wholesalers and retailers—until July 1st at the earliest. Even then prices are not cut to anywhere near the low figure Brill stores ask now for these high-grade straw hats.

BOGUS MONEY MILL FOUND ON A FARM

Secret Service Agents Pounce Down on a Connecticut Place, Capturing Three Men.

PLANT COMPLETE, THEY SAY

Three Other Prisoners Taken Here and a Large Amount of Silver Confiscated.

Following the arrest of three men in this city last night on charges of counterfeiting, Capt. Flynn of the Secret Service told of a raid that he and six of the Secret Service agents made yesterday on an alleged counterfeiting plant on a lonely farm four miles from Wilton, Conn. Three men were taken prisoners at the farm, and at Capt. Flynn's orders were held prisoners in the farmhouse and will be locked up this morning in New Haven or Bridgeport.

On the farm Capt. Flynn says he and his men found a complete counterfeiting plant, not only for the making of silver coins, but also paper money. The men, the Captain says, had just got ready to turn out the money and had struck off a few of the paper bills and minted some silver money. It was a wonderfully complete plant.

For more than three months Capt. Flynn and the Secret Service agents have been working on the case. They first got a clue that preparations were being made to turn out paper and silver money. It was some time before they could get any definite information as to the farm in Connecticut.

The farm, according to Flynn, was a 40-acre place, and part of it was under cultivation, so that it looked like anything but a place intended for making money. The rustic appearance was further heightened by two cows kept in a meadow. The farm house, the Captain says, was so situated that from its windows a view could be had for half a mile up and down the road which gives access to the place.

Capt. Flynn describes the farm as being on the Beldon Hill Road, in Wilton Township, Fairfield County. Deciding that the time was ripe for a raid on the premises, he and his men made their preparations yesterday morning.

Used Field Glasses.

They had been watching the farmhouse from a distance through powerful field glasses, but had never been near it except to pass it in automobiles, which did not attract attention. Because of the view that could be had both up and down the road it was decided to use an automobile in making the raid. Flynn and his six men left New York in a touring car. Reaching the neighborhood of the farm, they put on high speed and swept down on the farm, and on reaching the narrow lane leading to the farmhouse swerved into it and brought the machine up on the lawn in front of the house.

The Secret Service men piled out and into the house before the three men had time to gather their wits. They were quickly overpowered, handcuffed, and locked in a room, with Secret Service men on guard over them.

In the cellar of the house, Capt. Flynn says, he and his men found the most extensive counterfeiting plant for coins ever encountered. Samples of counterfeit half dollars which had just been turned out were found. What made the plant a formidable one, Flynn says, was that the men were using a stamping machine much on the type of those used by the Government. A seventy-five ton pressure was used in turning out the coins, and because of this the stamping machine had to be kept in the cellar.

One of the most remarkable things about the plans of the alleged counterfeiters was that they were using silver of exactly the same quality as the Government. Even then, Flynn says, at the prevailing price of silver they would have made 100 per cent. profit.

On the first floor of the house they found the presses for turning out the paper money. Counterfeit Indian head $5 silver certificates were found which had just been turned off the press. The engraving was good, Flynn says, but the printing was bad. This would have improved as the work went on, he asserts, and the bills would have been remarkable imitations.

Who the Prisoners Are.

The three prisoners taken on the farm said they were Michael C. Amico, a machinest; Caesar Mandara, an engraver, and Antonio Posca, who gave his address as 121 Mulberry Street. Amico, Capt. Flynn says, was convicted some years ago in the Federal courts in this city for counterfeiting, and served his sentence. Mandara was a very clever engraver in Italy and was brought to this country four months ago to work especially at this plant.

The three men were alone on the farm, but they had a piano in one room, and there were evidences that they had had a woman housekeeper there. Following the raid, Capt. Flynn and his agents came back to New York to get the prisoners they had already decided to arrest.

Three hundred ounces of silver found in the house were left there, and will be retained as evidence against the men. The three men arrested in New York will be taken to Connecticut for trial, Flynn says.

On reaching New York the Secret Service men started after Rocco Figliuolo, a printer. They expected to get him in a saloon on Mulberry Street, but got a clue that led them to the Grand Central Station. They hurried there and arrested him as he was sitting in a train that left for Norwalk at 3:32. He was taken off the train and made a prisoner. He carried a suit case, and in this, Flynn says, he found coupon bond paper, such as was used at the farm to make the bogus paper money.

Next the Secret Service men went to 116 Mott Street, where they arrested Joseph Feggelli, who, Flynn says, is owner of the farm, and also owns houses in Brooklyn and New York. "This man," said Capt. Flynn, "was financing the whole plot."

The last man taken was Philip Florie, a saloon keeper at 168 Mott Street. The three men were all locked up at the Oak Street Station. They, as well as the prisoners taken on the farm, are charged with "manufacturing counterfeit silver certificates and silver coins."

AUTO KILLS RICH MAN'S SON.

Merrill Trees of Pittsburg Ran In Front of the Machine.

PITTSBURG, May 26.—Merrill, the twelve-year-old son of Joseph Trees, a wealthy oil operator and President of the Wabash Gas Company, was instantly killed this afternoon when he ran in front of an automobile near his father's home in the fashionable North Highland Avenue. For several hours his identity was not known, and as his parents did not miss him no search was made for him till night, when he was found in the morgue.

No arrest was made, the police learning that the chauffeur had stopped his machine to await the passing of several pedestrians, and that the boy ran in front of the automobile just as he started it up again.

Conried's Widow to Continue Suit.

Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, counsel for the widow of Heinrich Conried, former director of the Metropolitan Opera House, will file to-day in the Supreme Court a motion to continue in behalf of the administratrix of the Conried estate his suit for $90,000 against the Metropolitan Opera House. The suit was begun by Mr. Conried shortly before his death for this amount. He said it was a balance due him at the time of his retirement at the end of the season of 1907-8.

JEFFERSON FUND MAN HELD.

Son of the Late Actor Says Morrissey Has No Right to Collect Money.

James W. Morrissey, alleged head of the "Joseph Jefferson Mounment Association for the Perpetuation of the Name and Art of Joseph Jefferson," who was arrested on Tuesday night at his home, 229 West Eighty-third Street, charged with doing business under a corporate name without having that name registered as the title of a corporation, was arraigned yesterday in the Tombs Court.

He waited in the courtroom for several hours to see Thomas Jefferson, son of the late actor, Joseph Jefferson. Mr. Jefferson finally arrived and said that Morrissey would have to stop collecting money in the name of his father.

"I am authorized by C. B. Jefferson to collect for this fund," said Morrissey. C. B. Jefferson was an elder son of the dead actor. He is now dead.

Thomas Jefferson said that the family had not authorized the erection of the memorial. He said he had made no complaint against Morrissey, and that the case was in the hands of the detectives. They showed Magistrate Breen a package of letters purporting to be from Andrew Carnegie, David Belasco, and other prominent men.

Morrissey was held in $100 bail for trial, which he furnished.

Thomas Jefferson appeared in Police Headquarters on May 18 and complained that some one was exploiting the name of his dead father to raise funds.

Morrissey later said:

"Two years ago, when first I conceived the idea of erecting a monument to Joseph Jefferson, I called first of all on Mrs. Jefferson at her home in Central Park West. She entered into the spirit of the affair at once. I showed her the names of many distinguished men and women who had already signified their intention to subscribe when called upon.

"Mrs. Jefferson wrote a letter to me, in which she signified her willingnes to have me take up the work. I was making good use of this letter and progressing nicely until one day she wrote me to return it. I consulted a lawyer, who advised me under no circumstances to part with it. Later, when I called on some of the men who had consented to act as Directors, they each informed me that Mrs. Jefferson had written to them concerning the matter. These letters had the effect of stopping the promised subscriptions, of which I was to receive 25 per cent."

500 COMMUTERS IN PERIL.

South Orange Local on the D., L. & W. Derailed near Passaic Drawbridge.

Five hundred passengers who left Hoboken on the 5:45 Delaware & Lackawanna local to South Orange last night had the scare of their lives when just before 6 o'clock, and as the train was nearing the Passaic River trestle drawbridge, just east of Newark, the locomotive, tender, and one of the six cars left the rails. The train was brought to a standstill within fifteen feet of the bridge. No one was hurt, but two women in the first car fainted.

The engineer was Morris Jennings of Morristown, N. J., while William Sampson of Hoboken was conductor. The accident was caused by the engineer's running past the derailing switch signal, but according to Jennings he had the signal that the road was clear. The point where the accident occurred is one of the most dangerous of the system, inasmuch as on one side there is an embankment which drops down about fifty feet. Fortunately, when the engine left the rails, it turned in the opposite direction.

As a result of the accident traffic was stalled on the westbound track for over two hours, while there was some delay on the eastbound track. Thousands of commuters were delayed in getting to their homes. Many left the trains and either walked into Newark or took the Turnpike trolley cars.

DR. PARKHURST SAILS AWAY.

Hopes the Democrats Will Put Up a Strong Man for Mayor.

The Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst and Mrs. Parkhurst sailed yesterday on the White Star liner Adriatic, to be gone about four months. Dr. Parkhurst will make his annual pilgrimage to Switzerland, and do some mountain climbing. They will also visit England.

Interviewed on deck just before the steamer left her pier Dr. Parkhurst said he hoped the Democrats would put a strong man in the Mayor's chair.

"Politics in this city are always interesting," he said. "The great demand now is that the Democrats put up a good man and a strong one for Mayor, one not inclined to take the view that things must be done entirely for political reasons. I mean by that a man who will not be guided by or allow his acts to be influenced by personal bias.

"As to the agitation regarding the 'lid' at Coney Island, the administration is able to enforce the law, and either the Sunday law should be enforced there or the place should be let alone. In the place of Police Commissioner there should be a man of executive ability, and in that respect I think Commissioner Bingham is lacking."

Ex-Mayor Hugh J. Grant and Mrs. Grant also sailed on the Adriatic.

KNICKERBOCKER GARDEN.

A New Armenonville Planned to Open Next Tuesday.

James B. Regan, proprietor of the Hotel Knickerbocker, announced yesterday that the hotel's Summer garden, to be known as the New Armenonville, would be opened next Tuesday evening. It will be surrounded with trellis work in a very light color with a background of purple, trimmed with medallions and garlands of white stucco. Gilt willow baskets, new electroliers, marble well heads, and natural flowers and plants will complete the decorations.

Flowers will be kept in one room throughout the Summer, different kinds of flowers being used in succession. The seating capacity of the restaurant will be about 700 chairs.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

The first exhibition of the Hudson-Fulton celebration tableau, showing the purchase of Manhattan Island by Peter Minuet, will be given on Saturday afternoon at the Eden Musee.

The controversy of Anthony E. Wills against A. R. Pelton and Frederic C. Smutzer, theatrical managers of Denver, Col., arising out of the use of the former's play, "The Lieutenant and the Cowboy," which has been pending before the National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers since last November, has been settled in favor of Mr. Wills.

Cohan & Harris announced yesterday that they will present "The Fortune Hunter," Winchell Smith's new comedy, at the Gaiety Theatre early next season.

The Shuberts have arranged to book attractions next season for the Burwood Theatre in Omaha pending the erection of their own theatre there.

The stage hands of the Shubert theatres have arranged a benefit performance at the Herald Square Theatre on Sunday evening, June 13, for the invalid widow and children of George Manee, who was an employe at the West End Theatre.

Seats for the opening night of "The Follies of 1909," in the Jardin de Paris on June 14, will be auctioned at the New York Theatre Thursday afternoon, June 3. The sale of seats for "The Boy and the Girl," the Summer show on the New Amsterdam Roof Garden, will open at the box office of the New Amsterdam Theatre this morning.

"The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," booked for next week at the Grand Opera House, will open on Tuesday evening instead of Monday.

More than $7,000 was taken in yesterday at the Lambs' gambol in the Grand Opera House, Brooklyn. The advance sale for the opening in Philadelphia last evening netted $10,000.

Henry B. Harris will start to-day for Chicago to look after his theatrical interests there and to confer with Elsie Ferguson, who is to have the leading role next season in Channing Pollock's new play, "Such a Little Queen."

William Morris has engaged for his circuit of vaudeville theatres Fuji-ko, the Japanese dancer who appeared in "The Vampire" dance at the German Theatre last season.

STEEL MEN TO SAVE THE KRUPP ROYALTY

Said to Have Invented Their Own Processes for Making Armor Plate.

KRUPP AGENT NOW HERE

Will Investigate the Loss of Revenue to His Company and Study the New Processes.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., May 26.—A hint of the cause of the visit of Baron von Bodenhausen, of the Krupp interests, to America at this time, leaked out this evening. It was said by one connected with the armor-plate industry at Pittsburg, that for some time a royalty had been paid the Krupp concern by the American makers of armor plate; and that the Midvale, Carnegie, and Bethlehem interests have each invented an armor plate hardening system of their own which they assert is far better than the Krupp process, besides saving the $130 per ton royalty.

No secret is made of it here that Baron von Bodenhausen, who yesterday landed in New York, has come to America for the purpose of clearing up the armor-plate case once for all. The Germans, it is known, have not believed that the three American makers of big armor plate could and have invented three different forms of hardening plate, each at least as good as the Krupp process. The loss of revenue to the Germans, too, has been very great, and the Baron, according to those in Pittsburg who should know, is trying to re-establish that revenue in some way, and is expected in Pittsburg next week.

That the Carnegie and the Bethlehem Steel Companies had each invented armor processes came as direct news to Pittsburg to-night. The Carnegie employes admit that it was not intended to make the matter public, but the coming of the Krupp representative appears to have made its publicity imperative. For years it appears the American armor plate makers were content to pay the royalty demanded by Krupp. The Philadelphia concern then invented a process of its own, and the others followed.

TAXICAB SWINDLE FOUND.

Boston Drivers Held for Altering Registers—Firm Lost $20,000.

BOSTON, May 26.—Police Inspectors in plain clothes have been liberally patronizing taxicabs in Boston the past two weeks, and as a result have uncovered, it is claimed, a scheme to defraud by means of which the Taxi Service Company has lost nearly $20,000 since the cabs were first operated in this city several months ago.

Four men were arrested to-night on charges of larceny. All are taxicab drivers, and gave their names as Cornelius F. Ryan, James L. McKenzie, Benjamin F. Young, and Telesphore A. Perron. The men are held on various counts, which charge larceny of small amounts.

The company alleges that the chauffeurs tampered with the registers on the taxicabs, making it appear that the carriages have traveled less distance than actually covered, and pocketed the differences in fares.

DEMOCRATIC UNION LAUNCHED

One Thousand Tammany Opponents Meet and Organize for a Campaign.

With many appeals to the days of the old County Democracy and denunciations of the powers of Tammany Hall the Democratic Union was fairly launched last night. A meeting of 1,000 enrolled Democrats was held in the Metropolitan Life Building and elected a Chairman and a Committee on Permanent Organization. The committee of 100 Democrats who will manage the new party was not nominated. That will be left to the permanent Chairman.

Ex-Assemblyman J. J. O'Connell brought the meeting to order, and then each Assembly District in Manhattan and the Bronx was called on to name two members of the Committee on Organization. Every one of them answered the roll. Col. Robert Townsend was elected permanent Chairman. In his speech of thanks he said:

"The spirit of the old County Democracy is still alive in the city. Some of its old members are working with their sons in the Democratic Union to bring back the party to the honor and position it once held. It is estimated that there are in the city 100,000 Democrats out of relation with the party. They have been forced out by their own self-respect. They cannot accept the doctrine of its false government of the boss, by the boss, for the boss.

"You can now decide whether the people will any longer allow a seat on the bench to be sold to the highest bidder and the importation of men from 400 miles up the State to fill places of prominence in the city."

Everett P. Wheeler, James E. Stanford, Walter S. McGregor, and Thomas J. Curtis, President of the Central Federated Union, also spoke. William J. Lee, who is fighting hard against The McManus in the Eleventh Senatorial District, met with a particularly hearty demonstration. He came to the hall in an automobile parade, starting from Tenth Avenue and Forty-seventh Street. In his speech he recounted the efforts of his political opponents to drive him out of the district, and attacked Senator McManus for refusing to vote on the Eleventh Avenue bill, although it affected his constituents so nearly.

"They may try to run me out," he said, "and do all they can to prevent me earning a living for my wife and family. But I'm Irish, and I won't be kicked out and I won't be driven out."

TRACTION AGENT ACCUSED.

Juror Says Official Talked with a Witness About Her Testimony.

A warm argument between an attorney and a juror in a case on trial before Supreme Court Justice Brady yesterday came near causing a mistrial. Angelina Battista, through her mother, Mrs. Anna Battista, is suing Frederick W. Whitridge, as receiver for the Union Railway Company, to recover $5,000 damages for injuries received by being thrown from a surface car at White Plains Road and 229th Street a year ago.

One of the witnesses for the defense was Lucinda Pickett, a colored woman, living at Mount Vernon. She had been examined during the morning session, and during the afternoon there was a misunderstanding as to a part of her testimony. Abraham Fry, the tenth juror, created a sensation when he rose in his seat and said he heard John D. Haughey, an investigator for the company, talking with the witness about her evidence during the luncheon recess. Haughey denied this, saying that the conversation had to do with finding a suitable place for the woman to lunch at.

Lawyer Hilton, counsel for the company, and Juror Fry got into a hot argument, which ended with the former asking the court to withdraw a juror on the ground that the juror was in direct conflict with him and could not be expected to render an impartial verdict. The court denied the motion. The case will go on this morning.

SIX KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

Hoop Mill's Old Boiler Blows Up, Destroying Entire Building.

DOWAGIAC, Mich., May 26.—Of eight men who were in the Geesey Hoop Mill here this afternoon when the mill boiler exploded five were instantly killed, one died to-night of his injuries, one was severely hurt, and one escaped without injury, though the entire building tumbled about him like a house of cards. The dead:

DE FOREST GEESEY, 42 years old, owner of the mill.
FRANK GEESEY, 50 years old, brother of the owner.
OTTO BEHNKE, 23 years old, mill employe.
CHARLES FRITZ, 30 years old, planer.
ESTIL GAMBER, 22 years old, fireman.
MARVIN STEWART, 35 years old, a workman, who died to-night.

Freeman Geesey, another brother of the owner, was injured.

A heavy rain at the time of the explosion prevented destruction of the ruins by fire and the cremation of the five bodies. Freeman Geesey was knocked down and stunned by the shock of the explosion, but on recovering consciousness was able to drag Marvin Stewart from the ruins.

The explosion threw pieces of wreckage in every direction as far as forty rods. The cause of the disaster has not been determined, but a boiler inspector, who examined the ruins, found that the boiler was an old one, the plates being 15-16 of an inch thick. The average pressure that has been maintained was 116 pounds.

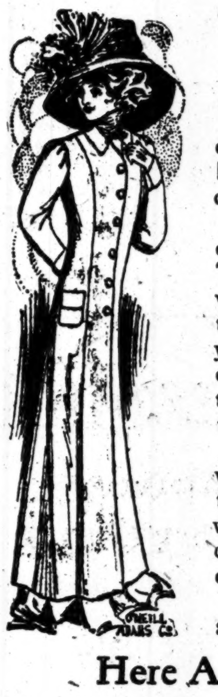
Women's Coats That Go



O'NEILL ADAMS CO.

Both Buildings.

The most interesting cloth we know is Rosebery cloth—and this is its characteristic: You can't get water through it without making holes in it! Take a piece, fill it with water, squeeze it, keep the water in it all day if you like—then shake it out—snap the cloth between your hands, and the last drop flies from it.

It is of this cloth that we have made some of the best looking raincoats we have—rain or shine coats—in a range of colors that sell for $15.

What a coat it is for a day spent outdoors!

LORIMER A SENATOR; WANTS LOWER TARIFF

Combination of Democrats and Republicans Breaks the Deadlock in Illinois.

DEAL WAS MADE SECRETLY

New Senator Declares He Will Support Platform Pledge on Tariff—Hopkins Wishes Him Success.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 26.—William Lorimer, the Sixth District Congressman, the blonde and bland Nemesis of Albert J. Hopkins, is the Senator-elect from Illinois. A non-partisan alliance, similar to that which re-elected Mr. Shurtleff as Speaker at the beginning of the session, to-day broke the deadlock which has tied up the General Assembly since Jan. 20, which has stifled legislation and made of distinguished statesmen mere packages of nerves.

Mr. Lorimer, who would not start in the race until he was sure he would succeed, gave the word at noon, and at 2:35 o'clock this afternoon, on the ninety-fifth ballot, he was declared elected to the chair occupied for six years by Mr. Hopkins. He received 108 votes to 90, six more than enough to elect.

The outward quietness with which the election of Mr. Lorimer was brought about testifies to his consummate political prowess. Until a few days ago he had not received a vote for Senator, while Senator Hopkins, who went before the Legislature with the indorsement of the primary election of the Republicans of Illinois, had kept within from 20 to 30 votes of a majority during the five months of the deadlock.

A few days ago Mr. Lorimer received one vote, and rumors were heard that he was about to be elected by a carefully arranged bi-partisan coalition. In was announced that as soon as a few details were arranged he would be put forward, but that nothing would be done until success was assured.

Senator Lorimer was called before the joint Assembly after his election and said:

"Receiving the votes of the two great parties of the country is a new precedent in the history of this great Commonwealth. Every Democrat that voted for me to-day knew that he was voting for a Republican; every Republican that voted for me knew that he was voting for a man who believes in the principles of his great party.

"Such a condition as exists in this hall could not have obtained twenty years ago, but the parties have been growing in their great principles closer and closer together every day until now we are separated by just a few great principles, and that which has continued the chasm between the great parties is the tariff issue.

"Personally, all my life I have been a protectionist. All my life I have been for what is known as a 'high protective tariff,' but in our last Republican National Convention our party, the Republican Party, declared for a lower tariff or a tariff revision downward. I do not know whether that legislation will yield revenue enough to conduct the affairs of the country, but I do know that the party to which I belong will keep the faith and pass a bill along the lines passed by the House of Representatives."

Mr. Lorimer then spoke of his work for the deep waterway from the lakes to the Gulf, of which project he is frequently called the father, and predicted that during his term as Senator the scheme would be put on the way to completion.

Ex-Senator Hopkins also made a speech, in which he said:

"I would rather have the loyal support of men who have stood by me during these long months and the principles of the primary law than any office. I would rather stand for the principles of the Republican Party as expressed at the polls than to have any office, whatever that office may be. I have nothing but good wishes for my successful competitor. I regret he was elected by Democratic votes, because this country should be governed by political parties."

The breaking of the dead-lock was not permitted to pass without exciting incidents. Ex-Lieut. Gov. Northcott, a Hopkins leader, who is now United States District Attorney at Springfield, was dragged from the main floor of the House by policemen for lobbying on the floor.

Lee O'Neil Browne, minority leader, who advocated the election of Lorimer, resented words of Representative English, who gave the impression by inference that improper influence had been used to procure Democratic votes for Lorimer.

"I do not know what the gentleman means," said Browne, "but if he means that improper influences have been used he is a liar. I hope he did not mean it. But if he did and will repeat his words to me outside of this hall I will pledge you that one of us will never make those remarks again."

English did not take up the challenge.

For the last five years or so Lorimer has been the ex-boss, rather than the actual boss, of Chicago and Cook County. His control was broken when Charles S. Deneen was first nominated for Governor in 1904. Deneen had been elected State's Attorney of Cook County as a Lorimer man, but went over to the "Reformers," so-called, and made his fight for delegates. In a convention that was deadlocked for weeks, Deneen was named for Governor by a combination of factions, which he has since tried to mold into a State machine. Last year he won at the primaries and was nominated and elected for a second term, although heavily cut in the Chicago districts, where Lorimer was strong.

In the meantime Senator Hopkins, whom Lorimer had elected, had also deserted the fallen boss. His idea was to insure his own re-election by allying himself first with Senator Cullom and, since Deneen's re-election, with the Governor. Hopkins had a plurality in the primaries last Fall, but Lorimer, politically crippled as he was, undertook to defeat him. At that time no political observer had any idea that the former Chicago boss could by any turn of the wheel secure the Senatorship for himself. It was only the long drawn out deadlock and the kaleidoscopic changes it eventually brought about that made it possible for the old crowd to bring Lorimer forward as its candidate and to elect him with the aid of Democratic votes.

Lorimer is a politician of a type distinguished by its supremacy in municipal affairs—Republican in Chicago and Philadelphia, Democratic, or Tammany, in New York. He is one of the kind who understand silence to perfection. He was born in Manchester, England, but came to this country when a boy. He got a start in Chicago as a street car conductor, and from that developed into politics. There as inspector of plumbing he progressed rapidly. By 1894 he had seen enough of the city game and turned to National politics, being elected to the House for the first of the seven terms to which he has been elected.

In the House Lorimer has been one of the stanchest supporters of the special interests of Chicago. Although not representing the beef-packing district he was the particular champion of the packers during the Roosevelt fight for the Meat Inspection bill.

JEWISH CONFIRMATION DAY.

Yesterday's Festival Commemorates the Gift of the Law on Sinai.

The festival of Shebuoth, or the Feast of Weeks, was celebrated by Jews throughout the world yesterday, with special services in the synagogues and confirmation ceremonies in the reformed temples and religious schools. The festival is also called the Pentecost, falling fifty days after Passover. It commemorates the gift of the law on Sinai and the festival of the early harvest in Palestine.

At the religious school of the Educational Alliance at Jefferson Street and East Broadway 142 of the 3,000 pupils of the school, who had successfully completed the prescribed four years' course of instruction, were confirmed, becoming "sons and daughters of the covenant."

Almost a thousand of their friends and relatives were present. The children read and translated the Ten Commandments, spoke short prayers, and sang Jewish hymns and psalms in Hebrew and English.

EARTHQUAKE IN MIDDLE WEST.

Rocks Buildings in Several Cities—Fires from Overturned Stoves.

CHICAGO, May 26.—A slight earthquake shock lasting only a few seconds was felt in the States of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, and contiguous territory, beginning at 8:41 o'clock this morning.

Throughout the territory affected only minor damage was reported. Several small fires were started by the overturning of stoves and many chimneys were razed. Aurora, Ill., is said to have suffered particularly in this respect.

At Beloit, all the college buildings rocked violently and many persons experienced difficulty remaining on their feet.

At Joliet, chairs and other light objects were overturned, and at Dixon gas fires were shaken out. At South Haven and Benton Harbor, Mich., windows rattled violently, and much china was broken. At Dubuque, Iowa, the vibrations seemed to have the effect of two shocks. Davenport, Iowa, also felt two shocks, the first shock being the more violent.

In Chicago the shock was generally felt, but in the great majority of cases was attributed to the ordinary causes such as the passage of street cars, elevated trains, blasting in distant quarries, or the passage of structural iron on big trucks through the streets.

During the period of the vibration it was almost impossible to get telephone connections owing to the swaying of the wires, damp from last night's rain, against each other.

Prof. Cox, the weather forecaster, said that the lights in his office swung from north to south during the shock and the chairs and light desks showed the effects of the vibration.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—A very slight disturbance, lasting about a minute, was recorded on the seismograph at the United States Weather Bureau here to-day, beginning at 9 o'clock, forty-one minutes and thirty seconds, Eastern time. There was not enough detail in the record to indicate the exact location of the disturbance.

MISS BISHOP GOLF VICTOR.

Defeats Mrs. Polhemus in First Match Play Round for Local Title.

Miss Georgianna Bishop, the present champion of the women's Metropolitan Golf Association, had no difficulty in winning her match yesterday in the first match play round competition on the links of the Nassau Country Club. She had for her opponent Mrs. T. H. Polhemus of Richmond County, and the runnerup for the National championship last year. Mrs. Polhemus was weak in putting and Miss Bishop was also superior in the long game, winning by 2 up and 1 to play. Miss Julia R. Mix of Englewood beat her clubmate, Miss Elizabeth Hurry by 4 up and 2 to play; Mrs. M. D. Paterson of Baltusrol won an easy victory over Mrs. D. R. Aldrich of Dyker Meadow by 5 up and 4 to play, while Mrs. H. F. Whitney of Nassau defeated Mrs. E. F. Sanford of Essex County by 2 up and 1 to play. In the semi-final round to-day Miss Mix will play Mrs. Whitney, while Miss Bishop will play Mrs. Paterson.

For the Consolation Cup only one match was played, Miss Marie Harrison of Baltusrol beating Miss Pearl Schwartzwelder of Baltusrol by one hole in a nineteen-hole game, the closest match of the day. Miss M. A. Irving of Richmond County and Mrs. W. T. Faith of Scarsdale won their games by default, while Mrs. Charles P. Tiffany drew a bye. A driving competition was won by Miss Mix with a total of 462 yards for her three drives. Miss Schwartzwelder was second with a total of 441 and Mrs. Polhemus was third with a total of 417 yards.

The contract for the erection of the foundations of the new Municipal Building at the Manhattan terminal of the Brooklyn Bridge was awarded yesterday by the Bridge Department to the Foundation Company, which submitted the lowest bid on the work. This concern is one of the largest and best known in the country. It built the foundations to the Singer Building, and many other large structures in the city.

BEST LOCAL GOLFERS PLAY FOR TITLE

Travis Leads High-Class Field in Qualifying Round on Apawamis Club Links.

SECOND PLACE FOR DOUGLAS

Eighty-four Players Start in Long Qualifying Round for Metropolitan Title.

Three of America's best-known golfers, all of whom have been National champions in their time, contributed materially to the interest in the opening contest yesterday of the Metropolitan golf championship on the Apawamis Club links at Rye. They were Walter J. Travis, who gave evidence that he may regain his local championship title by making the low score for the thirty-six-hole qualifying round, 156 strokes; Findlay S. Douglas, who is evidently determined not to allow his old rival to get far ahead of him, as he was the second best man, only four strokes behind Travis, and Charles B. Macdonald, the first United States champion. Mr. Macdonald, who in late years has joined that large army of golfers who play the game more for its exercise and sociability than silver cup winning, fell into the third sixteen, his total for the double round being 178. Mr. Macdonald, however, made himself somewhat famous by taking ten strokes for the tenth hole in his afternoon round, and yet made the circuit in 90. The ten was due to driving one ball out of bounds and putting two balls into the pond.

George T. Brokaw, who has been doing some high-class playing this season, was close up to the leaders with 161 for the double round. Frederick Herreshoff did 163, his putting being inferior at times. The field was a highly representative one, John M. Ward, R. C. Watson, Marshall Whitlatch, John Reid, Jr., Arden Robbins, Gilman Tiffany, and Oswald Kirkby getting among the thirty-two qualifiers who will be paired this morning for the first eighteen-hole match play round. Travis's complete card is:

Out	4	4	3	5	3	4	4	3	6	—36
In	3	4	3	4	7	4	4	4	5	—38—74
Out	5	5	4	4	4	4	5	3	7	—41
In	4	5	5	3	6	5	3	6	4	—41—82—156

There was a tie at 177 for the last place, and in the play-off F. R. Upton won. There were eighty-four starters in the medal play contest. The championship qualifiers, with scores, were:

NEW ADAMS EXPRESS HEAD.

Levi C. Weir Resigns and W. M. Barrett Is Made President.

Levi C. Weir, who for twenty-five years has been the active head of the Adams Express Company, resigned the Presidency of the company at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Managers. He was elected Chairman of the Board of Managers and Chairman of the Board of Trustees. He was succeeded in the Presidency by William M. Barrett, who was formerly Vice President and a member of the Board of Managers.

Mr. Weir has been in poor health for some time, and has transacted a large part of his business as President of the company from his home.

Although Mr. Weir's associates were silent on the subject yesterday, it is the general belief that his retirement from the Presidency of the Adams Express Company marks his intention to lessen gradually his business responsibilities and take better care of his health.

BABY NOW SUES McCARREN.

Action for $100,000 for His Support in "Living Image's" Name.

Supreme Court Justice Guy reserved decision yesterday on an application by T. T. Baylor, as counsel for Winslow Birnie, guardian ad litem for the boy described as Patrick McCarren, Jr., "living image of the Senator," for a commission to take testimony in Butte, Mon. The suit is to recover $100,000 for the boy from his alleged father, Senator Patrick H. McCarren of Brooklyn, breach of contract being alleged. His mother, Mrs. Mary A. Dixon, makes the charges of breach of contract, asserting that the Senator agreed to give her $100 to $150 a month for the boy's support, $100 a month for house rent, and $3,000 toward furnishings. S. S. Whitehouse, for Senator McCarren, besides opposing the motion, contended that it disclosed no cause of action and was not made in good faith.

"This," said Mr. Baylor, "was a special contract with the mother for the support of an infant upon the ground that the defendant is its father."

"There is no provision in law for the support of a child under such circumstances," remarked the Justice. He agreed, however, to accept briefs.

BILLS SIGNED BY HUGHES.

Two Are Aimed at Corporations Organized to Collect Debts.

ALBANY, May 26.—Two bills designed to prevent the practice of law by corporations, or the incorporation of companies for such purposes, were signed to-day by Gov. Hughes. The measures are aimed at corporations organized for the purpose of collecting debts.

One bill by Mr. Foley fixes a penalty of $5,000 fine for any corporation to assume in any manner to practice law either alone or through a member of the bar. Any person found guilty of violation of the law is guilty of a mesdemeanor. A defense that a member of the firm is a lawyer cannot be urged. Charitable legal aid societies and title guarantee corporations are excepted where they are approved by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The act takes effect Sept. 1.

The other bill, by Mr. Sargent, prohibits the Secretary of State from incorporating companies for the practice of the law and takes effect immediately.

The Governor also signed the following bills:

Senator Hill's permitting the appointment in first-class cities of members of the police force as probation officers and providing that the expenses of probation officers may be paid.

C. Smith's amending the highway law to provide that Boards of Supervisors may by resolution issue bonds of the county for paying the county's share of highway improvements.

Mr. Boshart's permitting the removal of snow from highways by the day labor system.

Senator Davis's providing that if the definite term for which any person is sentenced is two years or less the minimum limit of his term shall be one year. If the definite term for which the person is sentenced is more than two years, one-half shall be the minimum limit.

Mr. Whitney's amending the public health law to provide for expenses of local health officers in third-class cities.

FENCING CONTEST BY WOMEN.

Exhibition with Foils Given at the Fencers' Club in Fifth Avenue.

An interesting fencing exhibition in which several of the best swordswomen of the club took part drew a large delegation of members and their friends yesterday afternoon to the rooms of the Fencers' Club, in the Windsor Arcade, 569 Fifth Avenue.

Miss Bayliss, who holds the woman's championship of the club, had an exciting bout with foils with Miss Dix, in which honors were practically even. Miss Gilbert and Miss Walton opened the affair with the grand salute, which was done with all of the elaborateness of highly skilled swordsmen. Miss Collamore then showed the method of taking a fencing lesson with Prof. Danguy, the maître d'armes.

Charles Tatham, the ex-National champion, and W. De la Pore had a stiff battle with dueling swords, and Dr. Lawrence and Joseph T. Shaw gave an exhibition of sabre work. Mr. Shaw and Paul Meylan fenced with foils, and the exhibition closed with another bout with foils between G. H. Breed and Prof. Danguy.

Talks on Teeth

By G. GORDON MARTIN
(Incorporated)

The Book of the Century

We want to send you, free, the best book, the most helpful book, the most instructive book ever written.

The title of this book is "Martinolar Dentistry."

It tells people how to cure indigestion and how to enjoy their meals..

It tells them how to improve their looks.

It gives good, wholesome advice on the care of the teeth, and shows how lost teeth can be restored without the use of partial plates or ordinary "bridge" work.

In short, it tells them about the "Martinolar Method," teeth without plates, which is admitted to be the greatest achievement in the science of dentistry since it became a science.

We want you to read this book.

There are two ways to get a copy of it.

1st. You may call at one of our offices—the one nearest you—and while there allow our examining dentist to look your teeth over without charge—or,

2d. You can fill in the coupon below and send it to us. The book will go forward the same day.

The personal visit is more satisfactory, for we can then tell exactly what we can do for you and how much the work will cost. Call if possible.

But the book will bring you after you read it, no matter how far away you may live.

Nobody will go through life with a makeshift for teeth in the shape of a partial plate when he can get solid, beautiful, natural looking, serviceable teeth at a reasonable price.

Call or write to-day.

GIANTS' LONG HITS SPILL CARDINALS

Bresnahan's Team Beaten Badly in the Third Game of Series, 8 to 2.

BEEBE BATTED OUT OF BOX

Two Giant home runs, one by Father Tenney and the other by Gampa Wiltse, were spectacular features of yesterday's game at the Polo Grounds, but Bresnahan's Cardinals would have lost it without them; the score was 8 to 2. Yesterday's made the third home run for Tenney this season, which will enable him to begin refurnishing the wardrobe of his second boy.

Beebe, the tall Cardinal pitcher, who threw a superb game against Brooklyn last week, went to pieces in the box yesterday. In four innings he gave five men bases. Two of these free bases came together in the fourth, and then both men came home. He was succeeded in the fifth by Higgins.

Wiltse was being batted so hard in the last half of the game that McGraw sent Ames out to warm up. Wiltse immediately knocked a three bagger, bringing a man home. After one more inning he knocked his home run, sending in another man ahead of him. McGraw let him stay in the box, for though the Cardinals kept hitting him the game was so completely won, partly through his batting, that there was little chance of his pitching doing harm.

The Cardinals began well. Byrne, the first man up, singled to centre, but a long fly to O'Hara, a foul to Tenney, and a grounder to Bridwell left him on second, which he had stolen. The Bresnahan men did not become at all dangerous, offensively, until the sixth.

In the first half of the game the Giants had already taken four runs. The first was Tenney's homer. A strike was called on him. He jumped out of the way of a ball, it hit his hat, and another strike was called on him. He was peevish over his accidental strike, and in this humor swung at the ball. It went down to centre field, leaped through Shaw's hands, and went out to the fence.

In the fourth, with one man out, Beebe gave Devlin and Bridwell their bases. Schiel smashed the ball to centre, which sent in Devlin. Bresnahan failed to get the ball on the throw home, it went into the St. Louis box, among the players, and Bridwell walked home. Wiltse flied out. Then Beebe gave Tenney first. He tried to catch, threw to first later on to catch him off the base. He did that, but Konetchy threw wild to Charles, so that not only did Schiel come home on the play, but Tenney gained second safely.

In the last half of the fifth Beebe gave the very first man up his base, whereupon Bresnahan peevishly invited him to retire, Higgins taking his place. Two giants were put out at third that inning, and in the sixth another of them to whom a base had been given brought in a run. This was Devlin, the first man up. Bridwell fouled out and Schiel flied out. Wiltse jumped up to hit the ball down the third base line for three bases. Devlin came home. Tenney went out, Hulswitt to Konetchy.

In the sixth and seventh the Cardinals made their 2 runs. Byrne chopped the ball down on the third base line. Devlin would not field it to Tenney, but stood over it like a botanist studying a flower to see if it wouln't roll foul. Byrne carried home a run, for, having been advanced on a single by Shaw and a given base to Bresnahan, he had time to get home after O'Hara had caught Konetchy's fly.

In the seventh Herzog destroyed the effect of a stout smash. Charles sent the ball down the third base line to the fence. Herzog grabbed it up and caught him at second on the run. That made the second out. Higgins singled to centre, took second and third on Byrne's single to left and came home on Bridwell's flumble of Shaw's grounder.

It will be seen that the Cardinals were having no large trouble in finding Wiltse's curves. In the eighth the possible advantage of this was offset for good, and partly through Wiltse. O'Hara had singled, had taken second and third on Devlin's single, and had then been caught at the home plate by Bresnahan, to whom Higgins had tossed Bridwell's chopped ball. Schiel flied out, but Devlin beat the ball home. Wiltse jumped up to hit the ball, smashed it out into upper left field, sent Bridwell in ahead of him, and came on home, holding his cap in his hand, pale, gaunt, and exhausted.

That was all—except the fire. About 3:30 o'clock the outside of the tall fence near the club house caught fire. Several square feet of fence was blackened before the flames were extinguished by the bucket brigade. No St. Louis sympathizer is expected. The amateur baseball players who practice on the vacant lot outside the fence are suspected. If a hole had been burned through the fence without discovery there would have been some unpaid admissions in the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon. The score:

Overall Too Much for Brooklyn.

"Big Jeff" Overall, the Chicago pitcher, had the Brooklyn batsmen at his mercy yesterday when he confined them to two clean hits and a scratch hit, and did not allow them a run, while his team scored two.

As showing the effectiveness of his delivery, he gave only two bases on called balls—one in the first and one in the second inning—struck out ten, and only two men reached second base in the entire nine innings. He "fanned" Alperman three times, Jordan twice, Lenox twice, and Burch, Hummell, and Kustus once each.

The world's champions were exceedingly lucky against Bell, the Brooklyn's winning pitcher. They scored their first run in the first inning after two men were out. A force hit by Schulte placed him on first, and he landed on second by a steal, aided by a rather low throw of Bergen. Hofman sent Schulte home by a clean hit to right field. From this time only two men reached as far as second base up to the eighth inning, Alperman's drop of a fly ball, giving Sheckard second, in the sixth inning, and Steinfeldt reaching the same point on a single and Howard's sacrifice. In the eighth Overall made the only two-base hit of the game, and he got to third on Evers's out. In attempting to score on Sheckard's hit to Bell he was thrown out. In the ninth, Hofman opened with a single, got to third on a passed ball, and tallied Chicago's second run when Howard hit to right. The score:

Cleveland Plays in Good Form.

CLEVELAND, May 26.—Cleveland made it two out of three games from Philadelphia today, winning 3 to 2. Cleveland got its first two runs on Berger's single, Goode's triple, and an out, winning in the last half of the ninth on Turner's scratch hit, his steal, and Hinchman's single. In the first half of this inning Davis's triple had sent Ganley home with the run that tied the score. Score:

COLLEGE BASEBALL.

Fordham Shuts Out Holy Cross.

For the second time this season the Fordham baseball team beat Holy Cross by the score of 1 to 0 yesterday at Fordham Field. It was a pitching duel throughout, both boxmen keeping the hits well scattered, but C. Mahoney was particularly effective when his team was in a hole.

Dowd, who administered the first defeat to Harvard this year, pitched splendidly until the seventh inning, when C. Mahoney's three-bagger was peeled off, followed by Scanlon's drive after Scheiss had struck out, when Mahoney tallied what was the winning run.

Holy Cross showed dangerous in the eighth, when D. Mahoney made a triple, but, attempting to stretch it into a homer, was nabbed at the plate by a hair-line play.

Saturday Fordham plays Bucknell at Fordham. The score:

BENZ MAKES YALE HILL CLIMB RECORD

Negotiates Steep Ascent at Shingle Hill in Fifty-one Seconds.

FASTEST TIME OF THE DAY

Motorists from New York and Boston Witness Contests—Motor Cycles Do Well.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, May 26.—Ninety-one motor cars, the fastest in this country, competed to-day in the hill-climbing contests of the Yale University Automobile Club, held on Shingle Hill, a steep ascent seven-eighths of a mile long, at West Haven, about four miles from here. Automobile enthusiasts from New York and Boston attended the meet, which was a great success.

Chief interest centred in the free-for-all event. David Bruce-Brown, the wealthy young amateur, captured this contest in his 120 horse power Benz car, negotiating the hill in 51 seconds flat, 15 1-5 seconds faster than the record made last year over the same course. Bruce-Brown had anticipated making a new world's record, and was disappointed at failing to do so, although his performance was greeted with warm applause. H. Walter Webb took second in the free-for-all.

There was a crowd of 15,000 people on hand when the first event was run off. The course was so efficiently policed by Yale students and the police that not an accident occurred. The nearest approach to an accident was in the free-for-all event, when Cameron, driver of the Chalmers-Detroit car, lost control of his machine for a second at the top of the second hill. The car swerved dangerously and narrowly escaped dashing among the spectators.

Fast time was made by the motor cycles in the free-for-all motor cycle event. Peter Cox of New Haven drove an Indian machine over the course in 55 seconds. The Indian cars captured all the honors in the motor cycle races. The summaries:

Class 1—Stock Cars Costing from $800 to $1,250.—Won by Buick, (Robert Bauman.) Time—1:10 4-5.

Class 2—Stock Cars from $1,250 to $2,000.—Won by Buick, (R. Bauman.) Time—1:07 3-5.

Class 3—Stock Cars from $2,000 to $3,000.—Won by Knox, (F. W. Belchar, Springfield, Mass.) Time—1:05 1-5.

Class 4—Stock Cars from $3,000 to $4,000.—Won by Stoddard-Dayton, (Bert Miller, Cleveland.) Time—1:05 3-5.

Class 5—Stock Cars $4,000 and Over.—Won by Simplex, (Fred Molt, New York.) Time—1:04.

Class 6—Stock Chassis $3,000 or Under.—Won by Knox, (William Bourke, Springfield, Mass.) Time—1:00.

Free-for-All.—Won by 120 H. P. Benz, (David Bruce-Brown, N. Y.) Time—0:51 1-5.

HIGH SCORES FOR BOWLERS.

H. J. Miller of New York Makes Best Mark Among Individuals.

New record marks were established in the bowling championships of the National Bowling Association tournament at Madison Square Garden yesterday. A. Miller of New York, who chalked up a score of 644 against 631 by the former leader in this event. In the two-man team event, the Blatz and Stout team of Plainfield, N. This mark is 31 points better than the high-record figure set by Bergstrom and Lewis, who were the leaders for the first prize money up to yesterday afternoon.

AURORA, Col., May 26.—Owing to the severe storm and cold rain yesterday, after leaving Deer Trail I could get no further than Byers. The rain and hailstorm continued until 8 A. M. this morning, after which I started for Aurora. The roads were sticky and dangerous to walk on. As the day wore on the roads got better, but it will take several days before they will be in fit condition for man or beast.

My one companion is still sticking it out. The other four have given it up. A party of ladies and gentlemen met me at Watkins in an automobile. They came all the way from Denver. I will stay in Aurora to-night by request, as Denver wishes to give me a proper reception when I arrive there. The loss of time owing to the daily rains hardly permits losing any more time for this purpose, but I believe I can afford the same, as conditions will not always be as they have been for the past two weeks.

JEFFRIES WON'T FIGHT.

So Said Jack Johnson in a Public Speech Last Night.

Jack Johnson made an impromptu speech last night, and talked fight so earnestly that he won an outburst of cheers from the audience in a Harlem music hall.

Johnson and his sparring partner, Frank Kenny, occupied a box, which they entered before they were recognized. When the black holder of the world's championship was identified, the crowd began to call for a speech, and called so insistently that Johnson had to reply to permit the show to go on.

The boxer expressed eagerness to defend his claim to the championship, and said: "The public, and that means everybody, will never live to see Jeffries in the ring with me. I want him to fight, but it is going to be a matter of so much time that I am afraid you won't see it. Jeffries is a pretty old man, and carries so much weight that he is going to be a long time getting ready. He is too fat to train down, and it is going to be such a long wait for me that I have got to do something to fill the time. I am going to San Francisco to fight Al Kaufman next, but I still will be waiting for Jeffries to get ready." After the theatrical performance the crowd followed Johnson and Kenny to the street and cheered them again as they left in the champion's automobile.

The scores were 6—3, 7—5, 6—1.

Y. M. C. A. Swimming Records.

Two new swimming records for the West Side Y. M. C. A., West Fifty-seventh Street, were made last evening in the final indoor water sports of the season. C. Tifft made a new record in the 100-yard swim, his time being 1:01 2-5, and A. J. McHardy established the new record for the 220-yard swim, his time being 2:37 2-5. Four events were held, the others being a 44-yard back-stroke swim, won by C. Tifft in 0:30 2-5, and a 65-yard swim, which was captured by William Wedder, with six seconds handicap, in 0:35 4-5.

DRIVER HURT ON SPEEDWAY.

Police Sergeant Upsets Kilpatrick During Road Drivers' Matinee.

Frank J. Kilpatrick narrowly escaped a serious accident yesterday during the second Road Drivers' matinée on the Speedway. In the third heat of the Class B pace Police Sergeant J. W. Smith, while driving his entry, Ogden Smith, ran into Driver Kilpatrick, who was driving Alone. The horses were pacing very fast at the time and Kilpatrick was thrown heavily. He was badly scratched and bruised about the face and shoulders. As soon as Kilpatrick was thrown out Alone bolted and badly smashed the wagon. The horse raced the entire length of the Speedway Drive before he was stopped. In the second heat of the Class D space Lillie Wilkes, owned by Dr. Ferster, ran into an electric light pole and smashed the wagon.

Fast time marked the work of the steppers. Sid Axworthy, the former grand trotted half a mile in 1:04¼, which is the fastest of the season, and beat the best trotting time on the Speedway by three-quarters of a second. T. B. Leahy sent his black pacing mare, Who Knows, after the pacing record, but failed.

Wagner Beats Farmer Kelly.

Joe Wagner won his bout in the main event of the Sharkey Athletic Club show, Columbus Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street, last night, though at the last moment Farmer Kelly was substituted as his opponent, for Johnny Daly, who, or account of a death in his family, gave up the match. Kelly made a plucky fight, but was never able to hold his ground against Wagner's furious onslaught.

THE ONE HUNDRED.

There were three estates in France at the time of the Revolution, the nobles, the clergy, and the commons. We are not prepared to believe the report that the Committee of Nineteen, from whose assiduous labors will come the Committee of One Hundred, have divided this community into three estates, each of which will receive express recognition in the make-up of the great committee. Report has it that the Nineteen conceive that the problem of municipal reform can be worked out by the united efforts of three classes, business men, labor, and social workers.

This would be a mistaken procedure, so completely mistaken that on that basis the reform movement would be doomed from the beginning. The interests of business men are the interests of the community. And so of the others. If there be in the minds of the members of the Committee of Nineteen some vague notion of an appeal to the business man vote, to the labor vote, and to the social uplift vote, we hope they will promptly dismiss it as a delusion. The class vote is in itself a delusion. The labor vote is a myth. The social workers are a beneficent folk, but that eminence upon which they do their good deeds slopes off upon many sides into queerness. It would be better to leave strange new doctrines out of this reform campaign.

The Committee of One Hundred must make its appeal to this great community as a whole, not by classes. It must speak to the people, informing their minds, arousing their self-interest, and awakening their civic pride. Pious wishes, noble phrases, and general exhortation will land the Committee's candidates on election night where the Lawyers' Judiciary candidates were landed two years ago. Mere money will not do the work. The Lawyers' Committee had money enough—it had no organization, no political organization.

The Committee of One Hundred must have organization, and it must have an issue. The issue lies plain in the view of all, but we might as well acknowledge at the outset that it is not an issue that will spontaneously arouse the interest of the voter. Yet it is easily understood. The city is spending too much money, it is too rapidly increasing its debt and its tax rate, it is imperiling its public credit. These are the issues. They are all embodied in the one concrete issue of the Revised Charter. The revision would bring order out of chaos in the City Government, it would co-ordinate the departments, systematically apportion powers with correlative responsibility, and it would put the affairs of the City Government upon an intelligible, sound, business basis.

The Charter is the dominant issue before the people because it embodies the other issues, and puts us in the way of right remedies for the evils of which we complain. Yet nobody has paid any attention to the Charter. The people of the city in general, to whom it is a matter of really vital importance, know nothing about it at present and apparently care nothing about it. It will be the duty of the Committee of One Hundred to make them care something about it, to make them understand that the Charter is the foundation of reform; that upon that good administration depends. Under the present Charter the election of the best candidates that could be named would give no guarantee of thoroughgoing reform.

In order that it may be in truth representative, the Committee of One Hundred will naturally include in its membership business men, workingmen, professional men, all sorts of men who are animated by a desire for good city government and possess the intelligence to work for its attainment in wise ways. But no member of that Committee should be put there merely to speak for the interests of a class, or with the idea that a class vote may be secured through his influence. There are many rocks upon which a reform movement can go to pieces. The class idea is one of them.

THE LEPER EARLY.

The case of JOHN EARLY, who served nine years as a soldier in Cuba and in the Philippines, and belongs to the family of the Confederate General EARLY, is by no means hopeless. The disease for which EARLY is being quarantined in Washington was acquired during his Philippine service, and Director EDWARD EHLERS of the Royal Frederick Hospital of Copenhagen on Tuesday diagnosed it as leprosy of the anaesthetic type. The patient will not suffer, he may be cured.

Much is being learned about this historic malady, dreaded as the worst that can afflict mankind. Dr. ELIE METCHNIKOFF, who is studying the problems of longevity, is interested in the fact that lepers of EARLY's type live longer than normal individuals. Of thirty-four patients who died in the three years preceding 1904 at Pleiestiftelsen, the largest leprosarium in Norway, twenty were over 60 years, and the oldest was 95; while eleven of the seventeen who died in 1904 were over 60, nine of these were over 70, and two of the nine had attained fourscore years. In nearly all these cases the disease had cured itself, but had left scars.

Leprosy is not easily contracted. In the history of the Norwegian hospitals for lepers, which have been maintained by the state since 1849, none of the physicians and only two of the attendants, who are in intimate contact with their patients, have ever shown signs of the disease. The fact that leprosy is sometimes favorably affected by an attack of erysipelas, as are malignant tumors, and that its bacillus is nearly allied to the tubercle bacillus, makes it decidedly interesting to the specialists in the treatment of tuberculosis and cancer.

It can be cured. Of the forty-seven cases in the leper home in Louisiana up to May 1, 1908, five were practically cured, while in thirty the disease had been arrested, and fifteen of these showed distinct improvement. The remedy used by Dr. DEYCKE at Pleiestiftelsen is an extract of cultures obtained from the virulent cases of tuberculous leprosy. This is a destructive solvent of the living germ. It is fortunate that just now, when soldiers who were infected in the Philippines may show the first symptoms, and when it is known that many lepers coming from Norway have evaded our immigration officials, the disease has been brought measurably under control.

"BUDDEIZED" MILK.

Prof. VON BEHRING, Dr. RIDEAL, Prof. TANNER HEWLETT, Dr. TH. BEGTRUP HANSEN of the Silkebrog Tuberculosis Sanatorium in Denmark, and other eminent Danish, Swedish, Austrian, and German bacteriologists, have tested the sterile milk prepared by Dr. C. BUDDE of Copenhagen. They report that the process is inexpensive, the result more beneficial than that of pasteurizing milk, and, by their unqualified indorsement, they have promoted the consumption of "Buddeized" milk on the Continent and in Great Britain. The current number of The Scientific American describes the methods by which milk may be thus purified and "sold at the customary price."

The Budde process is twofold. Milk is passed in a slightly heated condition through a centrifugal separator which separates, not the cream, but the dirt present in quantities in raw milk. Thence it goes, cleansed of most of the inhering germs as well as the dirt, into a glazed and water-jacketed vat, where it is treated with minute amounts of chemically pure peroxide of hydrogen. Its nutritive value is not impaired; patients find it agreeable, adults like it, and children cry for it. Unlike pasteurized milk, The Scientific American says, it cannot be accused of causing rickets or other infantile maladies.

This city derives its milk supply from several States, not subject to Federal inspection. Our local health authorities may not police the sources of possible infection. To forbid the sale of all but certified milk would occasion a famine, and to require that all uncertified milk be pasteurized would make the price higher if not prohibitive. Because of the cost involved the city has refused to provide its own pasteurizing plants. If the new sterilizing process is better than that of pasteurization and less expensive, objections to a purified supply should disappear.

WORTH OF NEW YORK CITY BONDS.

A few days ago New York City bankers paid 105.17 for Baltimore 4 per cent. bonds. New York City is about to issue $40,000,000, and there is no indication that anybody outside New York will bid for any considerable quantity. Meanwhile the industrious gentlemen in the Curb market are helping the city to sell its offering by making a price of their own. It must be said at once that this price is not flattering to the city. Its 4 per cents have been selling around 102, and it has been hoped that the new issue would command a like price, but the price of the old bonds is softening at a smart fraction below 102, and it can hardly be expected that the new bonds will sell higher than the old.

As the price of the Baltimore bonds was made in open market by New York bidders, it may be taken as fixing an investment basis free from local considerations disturbing such quotations. This would remain true even if they were to be resold to Baltimore buyers, for assuredly they could not get them below the price paid by the New York bidders. It would follow that the New York offering is going at a bargain price. Another comparison making this even clearer is the recent sale of Chicago 4 per cents, also at a premium about equal to that ruling for New York bonds. The special applicability of this comparison lies in the fact that Chicago has exhausted its debt limit—not argumentatively like New York, but admittedly. It is a reduction to absurdity that New York City bonds are not of worth equal to Chicago's or even to Baltimore's. The conditions which can shake the position of New York bonds as the premier municipal security of America are not in sight, nor imaginable.

So far as we know nobody has ever disputed the good faith of New York as a borrower, or the worth of the pledge. New York means to pay its debts, and has available resources far exceeding them. Until these impregnable facts are shaken New York's bonds are worth whatever money is worth, and a trifle more than the obligation of most other municipal borrowers. There is a break in the argument that because the city has been guilty of extravagance and bad business management therefore it is like a tricky or insolvent borrower. The best proof of this is the reception of the wholesome disclosures which have been made regarding its finances. They have not been condoned or even palliated in any quarter.

It is true that the city's finances are in a critical condition, and it is well that the fact is appreciated, and thanks are due to those who have assisted in bringing out these facts. Nevertheless there is no inconsistency in holding that New York's promise to pay is worth as much as any other city's promise. It would be agreeable to see the speculators who are setting a figure below fair worth for the bonds compelled to buy in their contracts at an advance. Perhaps—if the suggestion is not too sophisticated—they are engaged in the process known as "making a basis to buy on." Perhaps they are, or represent, present holders who calculate upon replacing their old bonds with new bought more cheaply. In any case it is certain that they are of a different calibre from the responsible bankers whose offerings for the Controller's $40,000,000 will fix their true worth, meaning the worth of an unsurpassable promise to pay money. All good New Yorkers, and especially those most pained by recent events, would rejoice to see the new bonds bring their value. They would find in that fact the surest sign that efforts to heal by disclosing the secret sapping of the city's credit were doing their perfect work. The only possible threat to New York's credit lay in the continuance of a course of conduct which could not survive publicity, and that publicity is cause of pride rather than of shame, through the good work it has done and has yet to do.

MR. TAFT'S FINANCIAL PROGRAMME.

Postal savings banks and a sound system of asset currency—that, according to the advices of The Tribune of Chicago, is the programme that the President will announce in his first annual message to Congress, provided he has got the tariff out of the way. The proviso is portentous. The Tribune assumes that "the tariff is being reformed and revised on an extremely conservative basis," and "by this time next year will be entirely forgotten." That is a considerable assumption. There is no revision of the tariff now in progress or in sight that could, by any stretch of the imagination, be conceived of as a reform in the sense that the President has led the people to expect. The scheme that the protected monopolistic interests of the country are now engaged, through their allies and agents in the Senate, in perfecting is one which Mr. TAFT cannot but find absolutely opposed to all his pledges. If he vetoes it, it will necessarily be a signal for the renewal of the struggle for real reform that will shake the Republican organization to its foundations. If he does not veto it, if he can discover a way to reconcile it with his formal promises, there is no certainty that the renewal of the struggle can be prevented. The sentiment that a year ago compelled the Republicans to undertake to reduce the tariff may prove strong enough to force the completion of that undertaking. We confess that we can see little room in the probable course of political events for the serious prosecution of the programme attributed to the President.

Assuming, however, that the opportunity shall offer, it is a matter of gratulation for the country that the Chief Executive should be turning his attention in this direction. Of the two elements in the proposed plan of action, the establishment of postal savings banks must be regarded as an open question in the United States, the possibilities of which, good and bad, in our actual situation, have not been sufficiently studied to warrant its settlement in favor of adoption. Its importance in connection with the programme described arises from the fact that it is represented as a prelude and aid to the reform of the currency, which it would promote by providing other uses for United States bonds than their employment for the basis of bank issues. It is recognized by the best authorities in connection with our currency that this employment of the bonds, with the absurd and costly rigidity it necessarily involves in the currency, is a very heavy burden on and interference with business, large or small, in every branch of activity. Our readers are familiar with its manifold mischiefs which offer themselves only too often for exposure and condemnation.

The Tribune correspondent says that the establishment of postal savings banks > will be, therefore, the opening wedge toward the introduction of a vastly important new system of currency and banking, which will directly concern almost every man, woman, and child in the country. There must be something in the nature of a central authority, but of course that is a thing which will have to be worked out later on. Then, too, the greenbacks probably will disappear and later on the National banknotes, their places being taken by currency based on assets in the hands of the banks in a general way on a line long ago followed by Great Britain, France, Germany, and other European nations.

This is a rather crude statement, but it is sufficiently intelligible to justify the inference that the President's mind is turned definitely toward the elimination of the chief obstacle to sound currency. In any effort he may make in that direction he will have valuable help from his Secretary of the Treasury, who has for a quarter of a century been closely identified with the movement for really sound currency, and whose views are entirely in sympathy with the indicated general aim of the President. Certainly if Mr. TAFT can accomplish during his incumbency of his office any substantial advance toward this aim, he will have rendered signal service to his country.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Commuters Have a Grievance. So far have the improvements at the Grand Central Station progressed that only a few of the tracks on a level with the street are now left. The enormous excavation east of them has engulfed one after another of the old tracks, substituting for each two or three that are half way down or at the bottom of the laboriously manufactured abyss. All this, of course, is a change for the better, but, like most such changes, it involves troubles, inconveniences, and annoyances for many people, and bitter, these days, is the moan of the commuters as they toil up the stairs and inclines to the light and air.

For one thing, they are inclined to resent the discrimination which sends them twice daily to the very lowest level, while the passengers on the through expresses, who make only occasional journeys, still arrive at and depart from the station in the old, easy way, and will continue to do so till the very last minute. That, however, is only a new illustration of an ancient grievance, and the commuting tribe is wonted, if not reconciled, to it, knowing only too well that it is railway nature to be kinder to passengers who can take another route if they choose than to those limited to a single line.

What particularly abrades the nerves and tempers of the commuters is the failure of the constructing company to provide a direct passageway from the subterranean station to the Subway platform which lies so near it. This is going to be done some day, according to all accounts, but it is such a small job, in comparison with the other rock excavation which is going on, and it would save so much time and energy for the commuters that they cannot for the lives of them see why the connection isn't made at once—cannot, for that matter, see why it wasn't done months ago in preparation for the transfer of traffic to the new tracks. Both going and coming, all the commuters who use the Subway, and they are a large fraction, probably a majority, of the whole number, have to climb out of one deep hole only to descend into another, instead of taking a short cut between the two. And they do not like it, growling daily their angry wonder why the obvious and inevitable connection between the two underground lines is not promptly made.

Once in a while they even express surprise that the Public Service Commissioners don't do something about it!

Does Anybody Often Go Thirsty? While the newsdealers occupying stands under the stairways of the elevated railway had not yet succeeded in making it quite clear why they cannot combine the selling of water with their present business, they doubtless would be more than willing to do so if it were convenient, or even practicable, and therefore it can be taken for granted that their unanimous antagonism to the "centadrink" scheme is based on good reasons. That being the case, we incline to the opinion that their well-established and necessary trade should not be troubled, merely because some other people think they see a chance for profit in supplanting them.

It is not, indeed, at all a bad idea, that of the "centadrink" folk. We are not aware that there is any very eager demand for the proposed fonts, but it would obviously be well that all who find themselves overtaken by violent thirst while in the street should have a chance to slake the same with pure water from a clean cup at a cost too small to be felt instead of suffering the compulsion—so painful to most of New York's residents and visitors—of seeking relief for their parched tongues in places where that particular liquid is regarded as an incident or adjuvant rather than as a beverage. That is no reason, however, why the newsdealers should lose their present privileges. The stands as they are unquestionably serve a public convenience of more importance, all the year round, than would the drinking fountains even in the hot weather. The newsdealers, too, were first on the ground, and they are in possession. They pay a little rent to the city, and offer to pay a little more rather than be dispossessed.

To the newspapers themselves the matter is of small moment, or none at all, for the chances are that aggregate sales would not be measurably decreased if street stands were abolished altogether, and everybody had his paper sent to his home. As this better way, however, is not favored by some, and as it is not open to the great brotherhood of transients, the stairway booths are legitimate and useful, and the water people should look about for some other place in which to do their beneficent work and collect their yearned-for pennies.

Moreover, a faint odor of small politics exhales from their plan, and does not commend it to sensitive nostrils.

Toleration for a Revolutionist. By imprisoning the publisher of TOLSTOY's anti-military essay and his other political pamphlets, instead of taking action against TOLSTOY himself, the Russian Government has again shown that, however indifferent it may be to public sentiment at home, it is afraid to lay its heavy hand on a man with a reputation really international.

Had it not been for the fact that TOLSTOY's character and writings are known all over the civilized world, and are everywhere the objects of some admiration and more interest, of course he would have been sent to Siberia long ago. And there would have been a good deal of excuse for doing so, since the Government of Russia, bad as it has been, shares with other Governments the right of self-defense against its domestic enemies, and TOLSTOY has for years been preaching doctrines that directly tended to subvert the autocracy.

Perhaps his safety has been due, not only to the number of his foreign admirers, but to the fact that his theories of life and conduct, while revolutionary in every sense of the word, were too visionary, too plainly impracticable, to appeal to men of action. That would be a reason for tolerating them, particularly as any prosecution of him would inevitably be interpreted as persecution by a large and articulate class of alien critics of the Czar and his subordinates.

A PRIEST'S OBLIGATION.

Must Guard with His Life the Property of the Church.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The following is written in the hope of allaying the curiosity of Mr. Appleton, who in your issue of yesterday asked the reason why a priest should carry a revolver and who seemed surprised that church property should be protected by its custodians.

Has not a priest the same right to protect his possessions as has Mr. Appleton? Would the latter stay serenely in bed or "attempt to convert the thief" if he saw that worthy lifting the silverware from the sideboard?

Aside from this a priest is bound to guard the consecrated property of the church, if need be, with his life. The church is the house of God and the priest is the watchman thereof. To steal the sacred vessels is sacrilegious theft—an abhorrent crime in all ages—and formerly punished by the civil law with death.

As to what "business a priest has with a revolver," it seems reasonable to the writer to say he has the same business as any law-abiding citizen—the right, nay the duty, of protecting himself against fanatical bigots and other unjust aggressors. It is not so long ago that several Catholic clergymen were shot down by such.

Does Mr. Appleton approve of such murders, and would he leave the object of malicious wickedness unprotected?

A priest is a most valuable and useful member of the community. He is the friend, father, adviser, and consoler of his people. They need him more than they do the doctor, lawyer, or statesman. His loss to them is well-nigh irreparable. For no other reason than this should he exercise the right of protection to himself and to his property. Nevertheless many priests have refused to exercise this right, and some of the grandest pages in literature have immortalized this fact. Every other day we read of priests refusing to prosecute and offering to help those who have injured them.

But as to the protection of the holy vessels of the altar, a priest has no choice. He must protect them at all times from the blasphemous hands that would steal or profane them. This, perhaps, is beyond the understanding of one with the peculiar cast of thought of Mr. Appleton.

If Mr. Appleton will open his Bible at Mark (Chapter XI.) he will find that the same criticism he makes was made by the Scribes about the Saviour. JOSEPH P. EGAN.

SOCIALISM.

Though "Nurtured by Atheists," It Was Originally Religious.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The rejoinder of "E. A. M." to my defense of Christian Socialism against Mr. Haldeman's attack might pass unnoticed save that he voices the real objection to Socialism in the mind of most people. This is that Socialism, to quote "E. A. M.'s" words, is "a movement that sprang from the brain of an atheist, has been nurtured by atheists, and is to-day atheistic the world over."

When Galileo enunciated his two famous propositions—the fixity of the sun and the diurnal motion of the earth—his theory was officially condemned as atheistic by the Inquisition.

That, however, did not make it untrue and has not prevented its universal acceptance. The same stupid outcry was raised against Darwin's theory of the origin of species by natural selection, but it, too, has won universal acceptance by the scientific world. In neither instance has religion suffered, although its very existence was said to be involved by both these theories. So with Marx's theory of the economic basis of political and social institutions. To-day discredited because propounded by an atheist, to-morrow, I believe, it will be accepted as fully as the theories above named.

Far from being atheistic in its conception or in its essence, Socialism, as the Rev. Percy Grant said last week at the Church Congress in Boston, is fundamentally a religious movement. It was not originated by Marx. It had existed in various forms for hundreds of years. John Wycliffe—strange as it may seem—held precisely the same views as Christian Socialists do to-day. The Socialism that Marx himself first embraced was the "New Christianity" of Saint Simon—an attempt to re-establish all secular institutions and relations in accordance with the New Testament teaching of the brotherhood of men.

Lottery Ethics, 1763—1909.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There appears in a daybook kept by the Rev. Samuel Seabury, rector of St. George's Church, village of Hempstead, L. I., and father of the Rev. Samuel Seabury, the first Protestant Episcopal Bishop in the United States, this entry:

> 1763, June. The ticket, No. 5806, by the blessing of God in the Lighthouse and public Lottery of New York appointed by Law Anno Domini 1763, drew in my favor £500 0s. 0d., of which I rec'd £425 0s. 0d., which the deduction of fifteen per cent. makes the sum of £500, for which I now record to my posterity my thanks and praise to Almighty God, the giver of all good gifts. Amen.

Obligation of the Superior Race.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to thank you for expressing so fully and effectively the sentiments which all right-minded people must entertain regarding such a pronouncement as that of Justice Dugro, to the effect that "a negro suffers less in mind and reputation than a white man does from a false charge of theft." In the first place his remark was untrue; but even if more or less correct, was it not definitely against the well-being of the public deliberately to discourage a large portion of that public from upright, self-respecting endeavor, by showing them they need not expect to receive just treatment, but must always bear the yoke of the white man's egotistical tyranny? For that was what Justice Dugro's words and actions amounted to.

A superior race cannot ascend without taking every one along with it. How necessary then to discover to our humbler race an appreciation of their common humanity, their self-esteem, and of the extraordinary progress they have made in their struggle of the last forty years. DIANA BELAIO.

Wants Names of the Smugglers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few weeks ago the trunk smuggling affair was discovered by the customs officials and caused no end of excitement among the retail and wholesale merchants. The officials then promised to publish the names of the offenders, but as yet have failed to do so, and the newspaper articles have also ceased.

They surely must know who the offenders are, and, in justice to those doing business honestly, they should be exposed.

An offer of a cash settlement was refused this time, but I know of several cases similar to the one I write about, in which the firms caught smuggling—or undervaluing, which is the same thing—a cash settlement was made with the Government. This state of affairs should not exist, as it surely causes illegitimate competition. A MERCHANT.

CELEBRATION MONEY.

A Plan to Spend It on Something Besides Red Paint.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see that my short inquiry, published in THE TIMES of May 21, under the caption, "The Hudson-Fulton Money," has called forth some comment, and I hope the matter will be very generally considered by the public at large.

Mind you, I do not object to celebrations of a proper kind, but it certainly seems to me irrational for New York to spend so much money in this way when there are very material public improvements calling for funds, and I am of the opinion that funds of this kind could be spent for a better purpose, and with a better and more permanent celebrating effect, than by dissipating them in a few days on feasting, parades, and red paint.

We are shortly to have a celebration of the opening of the Queensboro Bridge to cost, say, $50,000, this to be followed by a celebration of the opening of the Manhattan Bridge at a similar cost, and then we are to have the great Hudson-Fulton celebration at a cost of a million and a half! By all means have celebrations of these great public events, but let us consider what is the most fitting, proper, and rational form for them to take. Instead of spending $50,000 each on celebrating the opening of the two bridges, would it not be better to build two public baths located in sections where most needed, and call one of these Queensboro Bridge Celebration Bath and the other Manhattan Bridge Celebration Bath, and for the million and a half of funds for the Hudson-Fulton celebration why not build two or three High Schools, and call them "Hudson-Fulton Celebration High Schools Nos. 1, 2, and 3" ? "WRITING ON THE WALL"

Instilled the Idea That Protection of the Lowliest Is Essential.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For many years the Consumers' League has been spreading the doctrine that we are in a very real sense our brothers' keepers, and that those who live and work in tenements in the so-called slums are quite as much our brothers as those who may live next door to us in brownstone houses. I was therefore glad to see these sentiments given dramatic expression in the play "The Writing on the Wall," produced by Miss Olga Nethersole, which terminated its season on Saturday evening, but which is again to be given next October. The idea that protection of the lowliest citizens is essential, not only from a humanitarian point of view, but also from a selfish one, was presented in a way to make a powerful impression. So much is said about the impropriety of patronizing immoral or vulgar plays that when a play is given which points a strong moral it seems to me that it should meet with the indorsement of the public.

The Gardiner-Blackwell Debate.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With thousands of your readers I have watched with interest and educational advantage the discussion on woman suffrage between Miss Gardiner of Albany, representing the anti-suffragettes, and Miss Blackwell of Dorchester, Mass., and her associates, representing the suffragettes, to which you have so generously opened the columns of THE TIMES. I have also noted the fortitude with which Miss Gardiner directs the rescue of her drowning cause, notwithstanding the persistent and invincible advance of her opponents' tide. This supreme test of her devotion to a losing cause calls forth our tenderest sympathy and highest admiration.

It is also refreshing to notice the dignified manner in which the discussion is conducted, the toleration that prevails, and the total absence of ill-feeling that characterizes it throughout. My friends, who thought women could not differ on such questions for the second time "without pulling each other's hair," have expressed some satisfactory surprise at this pleasing discovery, and agree that women have been the principal victims of that cowardly subterfuge, "When you cannot overcome a man's argument ridicule him."

When first Miss Gardiner's letters commanded my attention I was very susceptible to her influence, but at her request Miss Blackwell, through THE TIMES, and Dr. Glasgow, at the couple of suffragettes meetings I have attended, showed me so many whys, wherefores, and "nuggets" of wisdom for the adoption of their views that having the courage of my conviction—and, oh, what a tax on courage and pride!—I hereby declare myself convinced of the wisdom of woman suffrage, having never had a doubt as to its justice. "Nor More Than Life."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was not a little surprised to read in this morning's issue of your paper of the extraordinary terms in which Judge Mulqueen is stated to have passed a sentence on a negro convicted of manslaughter. He was sentenced to serve not less than twenty years "nor more than life" in Sing Sing. One wonders what the sentence would have been if the Judge had had no bowels of mercy or the case had deserved the utmost rigor of the law, or what steps the court would have taken to enforce the dreadful alternative.

Is this a printer's error or a case of legal phraseology referring back to those good old days when certain criminals were not only put to death but hanged, drawn, and quartered after death? CONSTANT READER.

The Recrudescence of Nuisances.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One would conclude that the "Anti-Noise and Anti-Nuisance Crusaders" had disbanded or temporarily left town, for there seems to be a growing disregard of the laws passed last year. In the approaching warm weather, when the windows of all buildings, both residence and business, will be opened, efforts to enforce them should be redoubled rather than relaxed. In walking on Fifth Avenue from Thirty-second to Fifty-ninth Street my pleasure and comfort are materially interfered with by the boisterous movements of the avenue motor buses and the continuous stench of the escape smoke from the great majority of automobiles. The Man at 60.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have always possessed an abiding faith in wisdom. It is our greatest asset, or this life is a contradiction. This wisdom is the product of a keen-edged experience. I therefore would like to know where, under the present economic conditions, there is any justice in drawing the dead line of activity so remarkably early. Because a man's hair happens to be gray, is that proof he has become fossilized? I have no patience with the popular "Osler" theory that a man at 60 ought to be chloroformed. Some men at 60 are at the zenith of their intellectual capacity.

Postmaster Asks for Reports of Delays

UNFAIR DENUNCIATION.

There was a sensation last Sunday
At the church where the flowers attend,
For Jack-in-the-Pulpit admonished
Certain blossoms their customs to mend.

He said that the hue in their faces
Was different from what it had been;
That such a departure from nature
Was, to put it quite mildly, a sin.

But after the service these flowers
Met and said: "He was unkind to aim
His arrows of anger straight at us,
For the fact is, L. Burbank's to blame."

PLEASE HASTEN BRIDGE LOOP.

Willcox Writes to the Board of Estimate About the Delay.

The Public Service Commission sent a letter written by Chairman William R. Willcox to the Board of Estimate yesterday prodding up that body in the matter of the bridge loop subway, which is practically done except for the section tied up by delay over the new Municipal Building at Chambers Street, Centre Street, and Park Row. The other sections of the bridge loop subway could be ready within three or four months, but there is the prospect of a delay of two years or so on the section that approaches Brooklyn Bridge because Mayor McClellan asked that construction be stopped pending the completion of plans for the Municipal Building.

Mr. Willcox in his letter yesterday refers to this fact and urges that the delay is costing and will cost the city a great deal of money.

"The commission," he writes, "has not received plans for the first stories of the building, and until they are received our engineering department cannot prepare plans for the station and approaches."

Attached to the letter of Mr. Willcox was one written to Controller Metz by Chief Engineer Henry B. Seamon of the commission disagreeing with the contention of Chief Engineer Nelson B. Lewis of the Board of Estimate that only two tracks would be necessary at Chambers Street if a loop line is extended down William Street and thence under the East River. Mr. Seamon points out that a two-track station at Chambers Street would have the effect of turning traffic from four tracks on either side into just half that number, and would thus operate as a permanent restriction on the bridge loop subway's capacity.

Mr. Seamon estimates the cost of constructing the additional tracks as $550,000. Mr. Lewis's estimate was $2,000,000.

BARONESS TO WED CHARLES P. HATCH

Marie van Haeften, Widow of George Mueller, Sets the Ceremony for To-morrow.

MET THREE MONTHS AGO

Minister Loudon of the Netherlands May Give Her Away—First Husband Adopted Her Name.

The Baroness Marie W. A. van Haeften announced yesterday to her intimate friends her engagement to Charles Phillips Hatch, a son of the late Henry and Marie Phillips Hatch of Newport, and a brother of Cyril Hatch. The Baroness met Mr. Hatch only three months ago.

The wedding will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3:30 in Grace Church Chantry, the Rev. Dr. Huntington officiating. The Minister from the Netherlands, Jonkheer John Loudon, will probably come from Washington to give the Baroness in marriage, none of her brothers being in this country. If the Minister cannot attend, a relative by marriage, Mr. van der Ouden Meulin, will give the bride away.

The bride's attendants will be Miss Abby Austin Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Austin Stevens of Newport and Miss Alice Cruger Hasell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cruger Hasell. Cyril Hatch will be his brother's best man. The ushers have not been chosen.

Mr. Hatch's parents died in his infancy and he was brought up by Mr. and Mrs. John Austin Stevens. He is a Harvard graduate and a man of means. He has taken a Virginia estate, where he and his bride will spend much of their time while in this country. They are, however, booked to sail soon after the wedding on the Nieuw Amsterdam to spend the Summer abroad.

The Baroness, although she lost a fortune some years ago, is wealthy. She has a profitable oil investment and a mine in British Columbia.

Her first husband, who was George Mueller of New Orleans, took the Baroness's name van Haeften. He died, as did also her young child, about a year and a half ago. Since then the Baroness has lived quietly. She had an apartment in the building adjoining the Plaza, which was burned several weeks ago, and she went from there to the Savoy.

The Baroness is of noble and distinguished ancestry. On her father's side he was the Jonkheer Johan Cornelius Adriaan van Haeften—she descends from the Dukes of Chatillon, the family from which came Pope Gregory XVII. Her mother was a member of the von Oven family. Her youngest brother—there are four—Baron Frans van Haeften, married Violet Brocklehurst, daughter of Lady Brocklehurst, and lives in London. The other brothers, Adrian, Carel, and Jan, all married their own countrywomen. One of her three sisters married the Baron d'Anethen, a son of the Belgian Amabssador; another married Jonkheer M. Van Lennep, and another one of the Van der Ouden Meulins.

"BIG TIM" OFF FOR EUROPE.

Smothered with Floral Emblems—Others on Mauretania.

The chief attraction on the Cunard Pier yesterday morning prior to the sailing of the Mauretania was a floral model of the liner, twelve feet long, resting on a bed of laurels and evergreens by the side of the saloon gangway. It was a parting souvenir to State Senator Timothy D. Sullivan ("Big Tim") from the Sullivan Club.

In a chat on the boat deck with the reporters the Senator said he would be away about ten weeks. After seeing the Grand Prix race in Paris on June 13 he expects to make a trip through Holland, Norway, and Sweden, and spend a few days in Ireland before sailing from Queenstown for home.

"Who will be the next Mayor, Senator?" he was asked.

"The Democrats will elect a strong-minded man, who will interpret the laws for the benefit of the majority of the people."

"What do you think of the attempt to close up Coney Island on Sundays?"

"I think," he replied, "that it is the most ridiculous thing I have ever heard of. It is a case of 11,000 people trying to wag 2,000,000, and it cannot succeed."

Among the 150 delegates from the various Tammany organizations, carrying floral tributes, who were there to see the Senator off, were State Senator Christy Sullivan, Timothy P. Sullivan, ("Little Tim,") Col. Charles Newman, Supreme Court Justice Erlanger, Judge Dineen, William B. Clavert, Larry Mulligan, Congressman John J. Ryan, Assemblyman James Oliver, and Joseph Cassidy.

William Randolph Hearst, who boarded the liner five minutes before sailing time, 10 A. M., said he was going abroad for his Summer vacation and would probably go on a motoring trip on the Continent. He expected to return in August.

D. O. Mills sailed on the Mauretania with Ogden Mills and Ogden L. Mills on his annual trip to Europe. He said he expected to spend some time with his daughter, the Countess of Granard. He will return in the early Fall.

Social Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, Jr., who recently returned from a motor tour of Europe, are at Morristown.

Miss Alice Cruger Hasell returned last week from a Winter abroad. She spent the early Spring with her sister, Mrs. George Borwick, in London.

Mrs. Henry G. Trevor, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, the Misses Morris, and Miss Faith Moore were among those sailing yesterday on the Mauretania.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hapgood of 107 East Seventy-third Street sailed yesterday on the Adriatic, to be abroad all Summer.

Miss Mary Sands and John Godfrey Saxe took out a marriage license yesterday. They are to be married on June 10.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Z. Lane and family, who are spending the Spring months at their country place, Onatru Farm, Ridgefield, Conn., have leased the Birch Island Camp at Wawbeek, Upper Saranac Lake, for the Summer.

FOOD.

FOUND OUT

A Trained Nurse Discovered It's Effect.

No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse of Wilkesbarre, Pa., writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion.

"While on a visit to my brothers I had a good chance to try Postum, for they drank it altogether in place of ordinary coffee. After using Postum two weeks I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared, and also the indigestion.

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noticed a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used.

"I observe a curious fact about Postum used among mothers. It greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes nervousness.

"I find trouble in getting servants to make Postum properly. They most always serve it before it has been boiled long enough. It should be boiled 15 or 20 minutes after boiling begins and served with cream, then it is certainly a delicious beverage."

WOMEN DESIGNERS' EXHIBIT.

School of Applied Design Crowded with Dainty Ideas.

The School of Applied Design for Women which Mrs. Dunlap Hopkins started many years ago to teach women to do practical things in an art way, had its first exhibition of work in its new building, Thirtieth Street and Lexington Avenue, yesterday afternoon. It is a beautiful new stone building, to which the school moved last January from its home in an old building on West Twenty-third Street.

There never was a better exhibition than this year's. Late visitors did not see some of the handsomest wall-paper designs, for they were bought early by manufacturers. There were silk designs, architectural work, life and antique work, stencil work, pen and ink and color fashion designs. Wilhelm H. Funk, who gave a prize for general artistic work, insisted that it should go to Miss Elizabeth Potts. She made some button designs which inspired every woman visitor to get a costume in blues and greens with which the buttons would go.

A number of scholarships were given yesterday. Mrs. Hopkins gave one, Mrs. James A. Roosevelt another, and Mrs. Grenville Kane, whose daughter is a pupil at the school, also gave one. Miss Dorothea Clarke, daughter of Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, is one of the students.

DIETERICH—HUGHES.

Daughter of ex-Gov. Brown of Maryland, Marries New Yorker.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 26.—Mrs. May Ridgely Brown Hughes, widow of Gordon Taylor Hughes of New York, was quietly married at noon to-day to Alfred Elliott Dieterich, also of New York, at the residence of her father, ex-Gov. Frank Brown, on North Charles Street, in this city. No previous rumor of the intention of the bride to remarry had been permitted to leak out, and the news of the wedding was a complete surprise to society here. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. R. Dudley, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Springfield, Howard County, the former home of Gov. Brown, and was witnessed only by the immediate members of the two families. The bride wore gray marquisette with touches of black and silver, a gray shirred hat trimmed with pastel roses, and carried gardenias. She was attended by Miss Nannette Morrell of New York as maid of honor. Frank Brown, Jr., brother of the bride, was best man.

During the later afternoon the couple left for Philadelphia, where they will be met by their big touring car, in which they will spend their honeymoon traveling.

The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Dieterich, who were present at the wedding. He is a graduate of the School of Mines of Columbia College and is Treasurer of the Indiana Lighting Company, of which his father is President. He is also owner of a large stock farm at Millbrook, near Poughkeepsie.

After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Dieterich will occupy the house at 806 Fifth Avenue, owned by the bridegroom.

BURDICK—NUTTING.

The marriage of Charles K. Burdick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Burdick, and Miss Ruth Nutting, a daughter of Dr. Lucius H. Nutting, took place yesterday afternoon at All Souls' Unitarian Church, Twentieth Street and Fourth Avenue. The Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her attendants were her sister, Miss Lois Nutting, as maid of honor, and the Misses Flora M. Burdick, sister of the bridegroom, and Mary M. Fill as bridesmaids.

Benjamin O. Satterwhite was best man and the ushers were Dr. T. I. Townsend, Karl Frederick, Herbert Mills, Joseph Truesdale, Weld Stevens, and Dr. Allen O. Whipple.

Mr. Burdick was graduated from Princeton in the class of 1904 and is with the law firm of Wilmer, Canfield & Stone.

Richard G. Cholmeley-Jones will be unable to be present, as he is ill, and Rodman de Kay Gilder will be best man in his place. The Rev. Malbone H. Birckhead will officiate. Mr. and Mrs. Pearson will spend the Summer at Redding Ridge, Conn.

MISS MACKAY TO WED JUNE 5.

Ceremony to be Held at Her Father's Country Home at Chappaqua.

Mr. Elliman's brother, Lawrence Bogert Elliman, who married Miss Edythe Coppell, and Hugh J. Mackay and St. Clare Smith will be the ushers. Alfred Mackay will be the best man.

Miss Mackay will have the bridegroom's sister, Miss Rosalie Elliman, and Miss Gertrude Bovee, who is the fiancée of Hugh J. Mackay, as her bridesmaids.

The Rev. Father John of Mr. Mackay's private chapel at Chappaqua will officiate. None but relatives and a few intimate friends have been asked to the ceremony.

JAMES W. ALEXANDER TO STAY CARE FREE

Ex-President of the Equitable Life in Vigorous Health After His Travels Abroad.

FROM LONDON TO SIBERIA

Was Under Surveillance at Abdul Hamid's Selamlik—His Own Story of His Long Tour.

After two and a half years of foreign travel ex-President James Waddell Alexander of the Equitable Life Assurance ward Craig Cammann and Miss Helena Vice President James Hazen Hyde of that company set going the insurance scandals of three years ago, is living quietly at the home of his son, Henry Martyn Alexander, himself formerly Director in the Equitable.

Although the elder Alexander returned from Europe last week bronzed and vigorous, in spite of his approaching seventieth birthday, he has no immediate business plans. Nor would he say yesterday that he had permanently retired from the financial world. He goes down to his son's law office, 24 Broad Street, every day at 11 o'clock, and remains there for two hours superintending his personal estate. He told a TIMES reporter who saw him there yesterday that he intended to sell the big gray stone Alexander home at 4 East Sixty-fourth Street. He asked to be excused from discussing the new life insurance conditions, having taken the two and a half years' world tour for the express purpose of getting insurance matters off his mind.

"I left America in April, 1906, with my friend, Mr. H. B. Davies," said Mr. Alexander. "After spending a few months at Munich with my New York physician, who happened to be there, I began to move from place to place under medical advice in order to obtain health through change of air and scene and the diversions of travel. Being in Venice I determined to make a trip along the Dalmatian coast, a part of the world which I would advise every lover of charming scenery and quaint foreign living to visit. Ragusa is one of the most attractive spots in Europe, with its old mediaeval town closely filling the space inclosed by massive walls, without horses or vehicles of any kind, but on the outside a modern settlement with beautiful hotel and lovely surroundings.

"Without stopping more than to get a passing view of Cattaro, which is the most southerly town of Dalmatia and from which the zigzag runs up the steep mountain to Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, I pushed along gradually to Corfu. I went through the palatial villa, which once belonged to the Kaiserin Elizabeth of Austria, who was so foully murdered at Geneva. This villa is now occupied by the Emperor of Germany. At Corfu I had a taste of the wonderful hospitality to strangers shown by people in these lands. The Mayor of the town, to whom I was introduced by a total stranger, came with horses and carriage and spent the entire afternoon showing me every part of the city with its various interests.

Watched in Abdul Hamid's Mosque.

"From here we traveled in a vile Greek steamer through the Corinth Canal to the Piraeus, the Port of Athens. From Athens we went to Constantinople, and it is a great satisfaction to me to have seen this wonderful city under the old régime. By the courtesy of the American Ambassador we were permitted to be present at the ceremony of the Selamlik and saw Abdul Hamid, with his gorgeous retinue pass from the Yildiz Kiosk to the Mosque for noon-day prayer, protected by an army of some six or seven thousand of the finest looking soldiers I ever saw. This ceremony, since the recent revolution, has been bereft of its most interesting characteristics, now the new Sultan drives through the public streets and the mob fills all the spaces near by.

"We were under the most strict surveillance while at the Selamlik, the ten or fifteen privileged spectators being watched by about as many detectives in front and rear, after being first required to divest ourselves of all carried articles, overcoats, &c. All the places in Constantinople where the recent exciting events have taken place are familiar to me, and the memory of what I saw gives an agreeable accent to the narration of historical events during recent weeks and months.

"I then spent some time in Egypt, going up the Nile as far as Assouan and visiting all the wonderful ancient remains and monuments of that remarkable country. From there I took ship for Bombay and went pretty thoroughly through Central and Southern India, and even to Darjeeling, in the Himalayas. From India we went to Burma and went up the Irrawaddie River to Mandalay. From Rangoon we went to Madras and through Southern India to Ceylon, which is one of the garden spots of the world, and while Columbo is intensely hot, the Galleface Hotel is constantly fanned by cooling ocean breezes, and by ascending Tokandy, some 1,500 feet up, the temperature is considerably modified, and by going on further into the mountains you can attain an elevation of 7,000 feet, and, so far as my tastes go, I found it cooler than was comfortable.

In Japan, China, and Russia.

"From here we traveled to Singapore, Hongkong, Shanghai, up the Yangtse-Kiang to Han-Kow, a journey of several days on a French steamer; from Han-Kow by railway to Peking and thence to Tien-Tsin. From there we traveled by a Japanese ship (one of the most charming I was ever on) to Kobe, Japan. We went to all the leading places in Japan, and sailed from Zuruga on the northern coast to Vladivostok, Russia. We spent five days in this lively town, and then traveled by the Trans-Siberian Railway eleven days to Moscow. We then visited St. Petersburg and afterward returned to Central Europe. I spent one Winter afterward in Egypt and another on the French Riviera, stayed some time in Paris, also in England, where I visited Oxford University for a while, and finally returned home on the Adriatic last week."

Mr. Alexander left this country in 1906 after a severe operation. Although he said yesterday that he had fully recovered his health, his son intimated that he and his sister, Mrs. John W. Alexander, the artist's wife, desired to shield their father from as much publicity as possible.

JOHN H. BIRD DEAD.

Once Prominent in Yachting and Amateur Theatrical Circles.

John H. Bird, who died at his Peekskill home on Tuesday, after a long illness, in his seventy-third year, was formerly a prominent lawyer and clubman of this city. As Secretary of the New York Yacht Club he crossed the Atlantic, in March, 1887, in the Dauntless during her race with the Coronet.

He was one of the New York Yacht Club's earliest members, and as Chairman of the Regatta Committee he drew up and signed, with Commodore Gerry, the America's Cup deed. He was an enthusiastic member of the Players', and in 1875, when the American Rifle Team went to Ireland, he played the title rôle in a benefit performance of "Othello" at the Academy of Music to pay the expenses of the team abroad. By the invitation of Genevieve Ward, he afterwards played the rôle of Duke Aranza in "The Honeymoon." He was Miss Ward's legal representative in the long lawsuit between her and the Wallack Company over the rights of producing "Forget-me-not."

Though an amateur, he was on several occasions invited by the theatrical firm of Daly & Palmer to play the leading rôle in a cast of professionals. As a lawyer he defended the interests of Brown & Seccomb when the Government tried to condemn Bowling Green for a Custom House. He was formerly Vice President of the Lotos Club.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at Peekskill. Mr. Bird is survived by a widow, and by Clinton W. Bird, his son.

William Boies Clements.

William Boies Clements, Treasurer of the Northern Westchester Lighting Company of Ossining and of the Peekskill Railroad and Lighting Company, died on Tuesday at his home in Hamilton Avenue, Ossining. He was born near Fredericton, N. B., thirty-eight years ago, and was a great grandson of Capt. Peter Clements of Westchester County, who, during the Revolution formed a company of volunteers and fought on the side of the King. In 1783, Capt. Clements and the survivors of his company joined the great exodus of United Empire Loyalists and landed in St. John, N. B. They proceeded up the St. John River and founded the colony of Kingsclear on its banks, where Mr. Clements was born and where his parents live.

For several years previous to his connection with the Ossining and Peekskill Companies, Mr. Clements was auditor of the Westchester Lighting Company of Mount Vernon. He was a member of Hiawatha Lodge, F. and A. M., of Mount Vernon; Cortlandt Hook and Ladder Company of Peekskill, and the Shattemuc Yacht and Canoe Club of Ossining. Two years ago he married Miss Violet Marsh, stepdaughter of the late Right Rev. H. Tully Kingdon, Bishop of Fredericton. Besides his widow he leaves a daughter, who is four months old. His parents and several brothers and sisters also survive. His body will be taken to his old home in Canada for burial.

LAMBS IN PHILADELPHIA.

5,000 Persons See the Gambol, and Receipts Exceed $18,000.

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—The Lambs' gambol at the Hammerstein Opera House, in this city, to-night was a huge financial and artistic success. Including the premiums paid for boxes and seats at the recent auction sale, the receipts exceeded $18,000. An audience of nearly 5,000 persons, including in its members the wealth, beauty, and fashion of Philadelphia, witnessed the all-star performance and cheered the favorites.

Previous to the show the members of the company, led by Victor Herbert's Band, paraded from the Pennsylvania Railroad Station to the Opera House, and after the performance the visitors were entertained by local Lambs at the Racquet Club.

Mme. Sembrich to Retire in October.

Mme. Marcella Sembrich will bid farewell to the operatic stage next October in the Royal Opera House at Berlin. A dispatch from Germany states that she made her last appearance of the present season last week at Lemberg in "Traviata," at which performance the burgomaster presented her with a gold wreath.

MEAT PRICES JUMP 2 CENTS A POUND

HIGHEST IN RECENT YEARS

Scarcity of Good Cattle, Say Dealers, Is the Cause—Poorer Cuts and Poultry Up, Too.

Meat has gone up again, and is now at a price which it has not touched in recent years. Most cuts jumped yesterday in the retail market 2 cents a pound, and it is not at all unlikely that in another week or two there will be a still further advance. The tendency of prices has been upward for the last year or two until now meat is nearly half as much again as it was in 1907. The advance affects not only the choice cuts, but those seen on poorer tables, as well as poultry. A table follows showing recent prices, those of yesterday, and prices of two years ago:

	May 26.	May 25.	May 1.	Two Years Ago.
Sirloin Steak ..	.24	.22	.20	.14
Round Steak....	.20	.18	.17	.12
Chuck Steak	.15	.12½	.11	.06¼
Soup Meat	.08	.07	.06	.03 1-2
Leg of Lamb ..	.22	.20	.20	.14
Leg of Mutton ..	.18	.16	.16	.11
Pork Loins	.13	.12	.12	.06@.08
Chickens	.30@.33	.25@.30	.22	.18

The reason given for these increases is a scarcity of cattle. It began at the time of the financial panic, when the Western farmers reduced their stock in order to get cash to carry them through the Winter, and has continued, say the packers, ever since. Then the high price of grain induced farmers to hasten their animals to market without keeping them to fatten for the best prices.

"People don't always realize," said a member of a large jobbing provision house yesterday, "that to get the best cuts of meat of the grade which is consumed in the first-class restaurants of the city, the cattle are not grass fed, but are fattened on grain. With prices for cereals what they have been all Winter, it did not pay them to prepare them for this market, and so they let them go. Consequently, there is a real shortage. People do not diminish their consumption of meat materially because it is high, and the demand for the best grades has actually outrun the supply."

There may be a still further rise in a few weeks, according to the same authority, on account of the Summer trade.

"We always expect a rise," he said, "in the price of the best cuts at the end of June. People, when they leave the city for the Summer hotels or take steamship trips, seem to eat more of the best meats than they do at home. In their houses there is a certain amount of economy through the using up of a joint after it has been served hot. But at a hotel the guests will take nothing but the best cuts.

"So prime meat is always rather more expensive in the Summer months, and it will probably go up in the regular fashion at the end of June. The present rise is due to entirely different causes, and the Summer demand is likely only to make prices still higher."

Retailers in the city declare that they are powerless to prevent the present increase. Prices are made in Chicago, and a rise in the wholesale markets there is felt by the New York consumer within two or three days. They maintain that they have already done all they can to ease the effect of high prices upon their customers, and that they have cut down their margin of profit to the lowest possible figure. How long the present rates will be maintained no one yesterday was willing to surmise.

"You might as well prophesy about the rates on the stock market three months ahead as in the meat business," said one retailer.

It is generally believed that the stringency is not likely to be relieved until the Fall. Then grass-fed beeves will begin to appear on the market, and if the farmers have been allowed by the wholesale buyers to reap their share of the present price list their number is likely to be increased. With the supply again overtaking the demand there will be a chance of a general reduction.

Mr. Frank C. Clark, whose cruises to the Orient and whose projected Cruises Around the World are internationally famous, desires to have it distinctly understood by the public that his personality and his liberal and successful management are no longer associated with the White Star Line "Arabic" Cruise which is being announced.

Mr. Clark has chartered the magnificent new steamer "Cleveland" (18,000 tons) of the Hamburg-American Line, the largest, best equipped and most sumptuously appointed steamer for cruising purposes in all the world, for his previously announced Around the World Cruises of October 16, 1909, and February 5, 1910, in place of the smaller and older steamer "Arabic," which lacks many of the up to date features of the "Cleveland." This will insure to his passengers already booked and those who will book for similar Around the World Cruises in October, 1910, and February, 1911, a far superior trip.

Mr. Clark also desires to announce his twelfth annual Cruise to the Orient by a magnificent North German Lloyd steamer, which will have signal features which cannot be equalled by competitors.

A Captivating Story of Love and Adventure By the Author of "The Princess Maritza"

A Royal Ward By Percy Brebner

"The atmosphere of vivid realism gets into heart to heart touch with the reader before the first chapter is half finished. It is just the kind of story and told in just the right kind of way to make the reader arrange for an all night companionship with the book. The author's 'Princess Maritza' was a remarkable piece of fiction. His new book deals with the wooing of Lady Betty Walmisley, the royal ward, a charming young woman whose personality was engaging and whose brown, imperious eyes asked questions and demanded answers."—Boston Globe.

SHARP BREAK IN READING

Heavy Realizing Sales Carry Stocks Down—Small Fluctuations Elsewhere—Improvement in Industrial Lines.

Yesterday's stock market differed in no essential feature from the preceding sessions of the present week. The trading was small and fluctuations in the majority of stocks were narrow. The disposition of the professional element, which is now almost exclusively in control of the situation, seems to be to curtail operations, in view of the approaching Stock Exchange holiday and the possibility of unpleasant news in the Government crop reports to be published very shortly after the resumption of business. In Reading liquidation went on in so determined a fashion that the stock closed with a loss of above 2 points, although movements elsewhere were confined for the most part to fractions. Disappointment among speculators over the failure of any "plan" to materialize following the Supreme Court's decision in the "commodities clause" suit was put forward as an explanation of the behavior of the stock. A very natural desire to secure profits accruing through the 14-point rise in this issue in less than a month was, perhaps, as good an explanation. The day's news was entirely favorable. In their regular weekly reviews of conditions in the iron and steel trades the official organs of these lines noted continued improvement. Over 77 per cent. of the productive capacity of the United States Steel Corporation was reported as engaged, with prospects of further enlargement by June 1. As a result of larger orders in sight, prices for steel materials as a whole were reported strong and quotations on steel rails were advanced again. A number of the larger railroads, including the Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, and 'Frisco, are understood to be concluding arrangements for the placing of heavy orders for equipment, and bearing out in a general way these specific signs of improvement in the industrial world were the excellent annual reports submitted during the day by several great corporations, including the Corn Products Company. Another matter the significance of which was not lost upon the financial community was the announcement of the agreement which puts an end to the long-standing friction between the Hill and Harriman interests through the joint use of the Northern Pacific tracks into Vancouver.

A small shipment of gold to a South American destination arranged during the day was so much in the nature of a special transaction as to have no bearing whatever upon the main gold movement. This is still interrupted by the factors which made themselves felt in the foreign exchange market at the close of last week. Money market conditions were practically unchanged. Bankers express some disappointment over the failure of the expected demand from trade sources to appear.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—After some show of strength in the early dealings the local list took its cue from the arbitrade group, and eased off all around. Transactions were not particularly heavy, however, and recessions for the most part were confined to narrow limits. Cambria Steel displayed strength in the initial dealings, and then eased off slightly, following the fluctuations of United States Steel. Rapid Transit sold down to 33 in the last hour. The whole list closed weak with the single exception of Keystone Telephone.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—Irregularity and several violent changes marked yesterday's trade. At the immediate opening weakness prevailed. Liverpool was ⅞ to 1½d lower, Berlin 1¼c off, and Budapest 1⅜c lower on good weather reports. Reports from the Southwest were conflicting, one set of experts upholding about 65,000,000 bushels for Kansas, while another maintained that the yield would be nearer 80,000,000 bushels. The interior movement fell to 123,000 bushels received altogether, compared with 412,000 bushels a year ago.

Cash wheat in New York closed: No. 2 red, $1.46 elevator and $1.46 nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.39, and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.40½, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The market at times yesterday showed about ½c decline over night. The weather was favorable through the West. Liverpool closed ¼d lower, and total primary receipts aggregated 900,000 bushels, against 930,000 bushels a year ago. Chicago arrivals were about seventy-four cars more than expected. Cash corn in New York closed nominal: No. 2, 85c elevator and 82c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 84½c, and No. 2 yellow, 84½c, free on board, afloat.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Liquidation in Reading.

Selling of Reading was one of the chief features of yesterday's market. The decline of more than 2 points in the common shares was explained on the ground that heavy liquidation was going on in the stock. It was current gossip among the room traders that one operator had disposed of a block of from 25,000 to 35,000 shares and invested the proceeds in real estate. This individual, it was said, had bought the stock much lower down and thought it would be an auspicious time to take profits and put the money somewhere else. Another story had it that a financier, going on two or three months' vacation abroad, had liquidated upward of 100,000 shares of Reading within the last few days. In such a market as has been prevailing since the middle of last week, the throwing over of such large blocks as these, it was said, was bound to have some impression on the quotations, but the bulls seemed to think that the manner in which the stock was absorbed gave eloquent testimony of the market's capacity, even though appearing narrow, to digest large volumes of liquidating sales.

Bears More Confident.

The bears derived fresh courage from the decline in Reading and were a bit more confident in putting out short lines elsewhere. Thinking that the market must be honeycombed with stop-loss orders at this level, they went gunning for them and were successful in a moderate way. After such a rise as the market has experienced, it might be expected that stop-loss orders were plentiful, but some of those who took the trouble to make a test reported that they were surprised at the comparatively small amount which seemed to be outstanding. They took this to mean that most of the holders of stocks were not worrying about a two or three point decline, and were satisfied to hold on until such time as they could get better prices. Stop-loss orders form an excellent device for the protection of the trader, but are bad from the technical standpoint of the general market.

Rise in Lead Preferred.

On news of the decision of the National Lead Company not to retire its preferred stock at par on Jan. 1 next, that issue rose about 2 points, while the common receded fractionally. For weeks persistent rumors have been current that the preferred shares would be called in at the end of the year, and in speculative quarters this was construed as indicating a probability of higher dividends on the common. There had been a good deal of speculative buying of the comon shares on this theory. There is little speculative interest in the preferred stock, which is held mostly for investment account. As a 7 per cent. cumulative issue the preferred shares at 107 would appear to be way out of line with the rest of the market, but the provision in the company's charter by which they can be retired fully explains the apparent discrepancy between the price of them and of other stocks of no greater intrinsic merit. While the action of the Directors was construed in some quarters as signifying that the retirement plan would be abandoned for all time, that does not necessarily follow, as the option of the company to redeem the preferred issue at par is perpetual.

Market Gone Stale.

Although Wall Street has been pretty well convinced for months that leading financial interests sometimes accustomed to work at cross purposes were getting closer together, yesterday's announcement of the conclusion of a traffic agreement between the Hill and Harriman lines in the extreme Northwest was received with a good deal of satisfaction in both conservative and speculative quarters. Its effect on the stock market, however, was not so pronounced as might have been expected at other times, when quotations were in the habit of moving in more decided fashion. The apathy with which this news was greeted brought forth this comment from an experienced broker: "The market has gone stale. When an announcement of that sort fails to put any ginger in stocks, the bulls must be asleep, or very tired."

Steel Trade Conditions.

That United States Steel common should make another new high record was taken as a matter of course. The new top of ⅛ per cent. above the previous high quotation was nothing in particular to brag about, but the daily new record for steel has come to be looked upon as more or less of a duty which the issue may be counted upon to perform. Subsequently it lost ½ point, but encouraging reports still came from trade quarters. Another advance in the price of certain products was said to have been made, and estimates as to the amount of business now being done by the corporation placed it at 77½ per cent. of its total capacity, with prospects of a further enlargement soon.

BOND LIST MORE ACTIVE

Armour 4½s and Western Pacific 5s the Centre of Interest—United Cigar Stock Moves Upward.

The general course of Curb prices, more specially in the copper shares, was toward lower levels yesterday, and with one or two exceptions the more active issues closed fractionally below opening prices. Trading was in small volume. One of the exceptions to the general market course of the copper stocks was Miami, which, on transactions of 800 shares gained ⅛ from the opening price, closing at 15. Ray Central and Ray Consolidated made small declines, as did Cumberland-Ely, Davis-Daly, Greene-Cananea, Nevada Consolidated, United Copper, and Nipissing. In the bond list activity centred chiefly in Armour 4½s and Western Pacific 5s. The former reported transactions of $725,000 between 96 and 96⅝, closing at 96 7-16. In the industrial list United Cigar stock became active, selling 1,975 shares from 70½ up to 73.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Trading Continues Generally Cheerful on the London Exchange.

LONDON, May 26.—Money was in increased demand and dearer on the market to-day, while discounts were stronger in sympathy.

Trading on the Stock Exchange continued generally cheerful. Kaffirs again were a feature on the strength of Paris, as well as local buying, but prices closed below the best. Foreigners were quietly firm, but Consols lost part of yesterday's improvement, while the new issues were inclined to ease on dearer money.

American securities opened little changed from parity, but light buying caused a general hardening of values. At midday the market was unchanged to ¾ higher. Later Americans experienced a period of dullness, and, with Wall Street selling in the afternoon, prices reacted ¼ to ½ a point, and the market closed dull.

Bar silver quiet, 24¼d per ounce.

Money, 1@2 per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1½@1⅝ per cent.; for three months' bills, 1½@1⅝ per cent.

PARIS, May 26.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were irregular.

Exchange on London, 25f 17½c for checks.

BERLIN, May 26.—Trading on the Boerse to-day was dull, with prices generally firmer.

Total deductions amounted to $2,713,263, compared with $2,550,978 in 1908, leaving a surplus of $971,202, as against a surplus of $1,005,257 in the previous year. The total profit and loss surplus at the close of the year was $4,890,470. During the year the value of plants and securities was increased from $81,112,602 to $84,626,243.

TO THE INVESTING PUBLIC:

We are now closing the financing of ELTIRO COPPER COMPANY, Silver Bell District, Arizona. This company's property has been under development for the past five years, and it is now brought to the attention of the general public for the first time.

Of the company's $1,000,000 issue of securities, $750,000 has been sold at private sale, and we now offer the balance at the same price paid by those whose money has brought the properties up to their present condition.

The securities of this company offer an exceptionally attractive investment opportunity. The financing is practically completed, the properties contain large reserves of ore that can be treated by the simplest and cheapest methods known, the greater part of the equipment for extensive operations is installed, and the company will be actively producing copper within 60 days.

Every step in the development and equipment of these properties has been taken with extreme care. The management has had all the advantages that expert knowledge and sufficient capital could furnish, and the complete success of the company's plans is now assured.

We believe an investment in the securities of this enterprise combines, to an unusual degree, the qualities of safety and substantial profit, and that no copper flotation of recent years had been so likely to commend itself to discerning investors.

Descriptive circulars will be furnished on application.

NOTE.—This investment is far removed from the typical mining speculation, and those who expect to be made rich over night will find little in it to appeal to them.

ERIE NOT TO ISSUE ANYMORE BONDS NOW

Morgan & Co. Take $5,000,000 Balance of 6 Per Cent. Gold Notes—Earnings Much Better.

ALL NOW CLEAR AHEAD

The Road Expects to Pay All Its Coupons After July 1 Without Resort to Emergency Measures.

The Erie Railroad, on account of the decided improvement in its earnings within the last few months, has decided not to issue any of the collateral trust bonds recently authorized by the Public Service Commission. This fact became known yesterday, when announcement was made that the road had disposed of the balance of the $15,000,000 issue of collateral trust notes authorized last year to J. P. Morgan & Co. A part of this issue was used to take up the notes which fell due in April, 1908, and another part was used for funding coupons which had fallen due during the last year.

The notes made provision for the funding of interest coupons falling due on or before July 1, 1909, and the funding will be carried forward to the extent authorized under this note issue. After July 1, however, the road expects to pay its coupons in the usual course without resort to any of the emergency measures which were outlined last year when the earnings had fallen so low as to make the adoption of some such measure seem imperative.

The significance which attaches to the announcement is that the Erie Railroad once more seems to see its way clear to conduct its finances in the usual way, and that it is prepared to meet its obligations as they fall due. There is thus removed from the railroad and financial situation one of the unsettled situations which grew out of the depression following the panic.

This is the Erie's announcement:

> The company has disposed of the balance of the $15,000,000 of 6 per cent. collateral gold notes which in April, 1908, were authorized to be issued for the purpose, among other things, of refunding obligations of the company maturing on or prior to July 1, 1909. It is, therefore, proposed to proceed with the refunding of such obligations of the company maturing on or prior to July, 1909, and to pledge them as additional collateral under the indenture of April 8, 1909, securing said notes. This will provide amply for the company's present cash requirements, and in view of the marked improvement in the earnings it is believed that it will not be necessary now to proceed with the plan of funding later coupons of the general lien and general mortgage convertible bonds by an issue of collateral trust twenty-year gold bonds as recently authorized by the Public Service Commission.

There was about $10,000,000 of the notes outstanding and the balance of the $15,000,000 issue, now taken by Morgan & Co., run until April, 1911, and at that time, the expectation is, they will be refunded into some permanent form of security. The future financing of the road will be done, it is expected, through some of the issues of bonds already authorized. Among these are convertible bond issues which are regarded as likely to be available.

The Erie's earnings are still improving, as is shown by the April statement made public yesterday. The increase in gross for that month was $373,732 and in net, $253,306. This brings the total increase in net for the ten months of the year up to $3,771,300. The net earnings for the ten months amount to $11,019,978.

J. P. MORGAN & CO.

New York, N. Y., May 25, 1909.

MESSRS. J. P. MORGAN & CO.:

Dear Sirs:—

The United Dry Goods Companies, incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware, has issued at par $20,000,000 Capital Stock, divided into $10,000,000 Common Stock and $10,000,000 Seven per cent. cumulative Preferred Stock, having a preference as to both principal and dividends. It has acquired from me in exchange for $8,650,000 of its Common Stock $8,650,000 of the Capital Stock of The Associated Merchants Company out of a total issued Capital Stock of $17,250,000. This gives the United Dry Goods Companies control of The Associated Merchants Company, which has control of the following companies:

Wholesale: THE H. B. CLAFLIN COMPANY.

Retail:
JAMES McCREERY & COMPANY, 34th Street, New York.
JAMES McCREERY & COMPANY, 23d Street, New York.
O'NEILL-ADAMS CO., Two Blocks on Sixth Avenue, 20th to 22d Streets, New York.
STEWART & CO. of Baltimore.
J. N. ADAM & Co. of Buffalo, and
C. G. GUNTHER'S SONS (FURS), New York.

The market value of The Associated Merchants Company's stocks is more than par, and the dividends on the $8,650,000 of its stocks at current rates exceed the dividend requirements on the $10,000,000 Preferred Stock of the United Dry Goods Companies.

THE UNITED DRY GOODS COMPANIES has bought outright from me four large stores, to wit.:

HAHNE & COMPANY of Newark,
POWERS MERCANTILE COMPANY of Minneapolis,
THE WILLIAM HENGERER COMPANY of Buffalo, and STEWART DRY GOODS COMPANY of Louisville.

The available income of these four stores alone, disregarding all other sources of income, exceeds the dividend requirements on the $10,000,000 Preferred Stock of the United Dry Goods Companies.

In the acquisition of the entire Capital Stock of these stores the United Dry Goods Companies has paid current market values for their tangible assets as appraised by independent experts, without any allowance for their exceedingly valuable good-will.

The merchandise has been taken at figures somewhat below wholesale prices.

Upon the opening of its books the balance sheet of the United Dry Goods Companies will stand in substance approximately thus:

$ 8,650,000.	Capital Stock of The Associated Merchants' Company	Common Stock	$10,000,000
		Preferred Stock	10,000,000
10,000,000	Tangible assets of Hahne & Company, Powers Mercantile Company, The William Hengerer Company and the Stewart Dry Goods Company.
1,350,000	Cash
$20,000,000			$20,000,000

In the tangible assets is included the entire capital stock of the Hahne Realty Company. This stock represents the store property of Hahne & Company, and is appraised subject to a mortgage of $1,250,000 on said property. It is taken over by the United Dry Goods Companies at the net value so determined. This mortgage can be paid in 1911, two years hence, should the Company so desire.

There is no net indebtedness whatsoever against any other of the tangible assets aforesaid, an amount of cash exactly equal to the indebtedness of each company conveyed being left in the treasury of each company to cancel its indebtedness. This cash is additional to the tangible assets of $10,000,000, and is also additional to the $1,350,000 cash in the treasury of the United Dry Goods Companies.

The fact that the United Dry Goods Companies has no net indebtedness, has assets at market value more than double in amount the face value of its Preferred Stock, and has from various and separate sources an income which in bad times would be more than double its preferred dividend requirements, renders its Preferred Stock exceptionally safe as to principal and as to dividends.

In this relation it is interesting to note the dividend record of The H. B. Claflin Company, which was incorporated in 1890, and that of The Associated Merchants Company, incorporated in 1901.

The H. B. Claflin Company has paid dividends on all classes of its stock from organization to date, covering the three panic periods of 1892-1894, 1903-1904 and 1907-1908, always full fixed dividends on its Preferred Stocks and dividends at a rate never less than six percent. on its Common Stock. The total dividends on its Common Stock amount to 139 per cent. The present dividend rate of eight per cent. has not been changed in ten years.

The Associated Merchants Company has paid regular dividends on its Preferred Stocks from organization to date, and numerous additional dividends beyond those provided for in the organization of the Company. After accumulating a safe surplus during the first year and a half of its corporate existence, it began dividends on its Common Stock December, 1902, at the rate of Seven per cent. per annum. It has maintained this rate to date, and has paid frequent extra dividends. Its average distribution for the last six years has been more than Eight per cent. per annum. In an experience covering more than eighteen years in one case and eight years in the other, neither company has ever needed to modify in the least the statements or promises made in its prospectus.

No change is proposed in the management of the affiliated companies. The active heads of the various companies will continue their customary work. I will continue to be President of The H. B. Claflin Company and of The Associated Merchants Company and of the United Dry Goods Companies if the stockholders so wish.

I enclose copies of the Certificate of Incorporation and of the By-Laws of the United Dry Goods Companies.

JOHN CLAFLIN.

HASKINS & SELLS,
Certified Public Accountants,
30 Broad Street, New York, May 24, 1909.

MESSRS. J. P. MORGAN & COMPANY,
3 Broad Street, New York City.

Gentlemen:—

In accordance with our arrangement with you we have made an examination of the books, records, and accounts of the following named companies:

HAHNE & COMPANY, Newark, New Jersey;
THE WM. HENGERER COMPANY, Buffalo, N. Y.;
THE STEWART DRY GOODS COMPANY, Louisville, Ky.;
POWERS MERCANTILE COMPANY, Minneapolis, Minn.

The general purpose of our examination was to determine the value as of April 30, 1909, of the assets of these companies in respect to real estate, buildings, store fixtures, delivery equipment, and merchandise on hand, and to study and report on the organization.

From our examination of the various properties and of the books and records relating thereto, and from the appraisals and estimates which have been furnished us by competent real estate dealers and engineers, we are of the opinion that the value of the real estate and buildings is conservatively stated. We are also of the opinion that the store fixtures and delivery equipment are conservatively valued.

Regarding the merchandise, from the tests made by us in several departments at each of the stores we estimate that the trading stock is undervalued below wholesale cost from 2% to 4%, and that 3% is a conservative estimate of such undervaluations of the stock as a whole.

It was noted that while two of the companies carry certain of their miscellaneous store supplies as assets, as a general rule all purchases of this nature, including fuel and feed, and in some cases insurance premiums and interest paid in advance, were charged to expenses as incurred. We are of the opinion that a detailed audit of the accounts of each of the companies would show assets of this nature on hand which are not reflected in the statement attached hereto, amounting in the aggregate to $75,000 or more. This amount, in connection with the excess of the cost of the merchandise on hand over the book cost heretofore referred to, makes total additional assets of approximately $200,000, which, in our opinion, might reasonably be added to the total of the assets shown by our statement to determine the real value of such assets.

All of the companies have a very large good-will value which is not included in the statement of the assets.

The loss from uncollectible accounts has been very low, averaging only a small fraction of one per cent. of the amount of the total sales.

A uniform system of periodical reports is maintained in all of the department stores controlled by Mr. Claflin. These reports show the result of operation in each department of each store by days, weeks, months, seasons, etc., and its aid to the executives and consequent effect on the results of operation can scarcely be overestimated. Such a system enables comparisons to be made which are of the highest value in determining and locating specifically the primary sources of any variation in profit or loss.

A system of reports is also maintained in each store which shows at once the nature and amount in detail of all slow-moving stock in each department. It appeared to us that these reports were receiving consideration and attention by the executives, and only about 3% of slow-moving stock existed in the stores examined.

The management and organization of the business throughout impressed us as being capable and efficient, with a spirit of earnest co-operation existing between the general officers, the store managers and all other employees. We were particularly impressed with the interest taken by the managers of the different stores in the success of the business as a whole, and the prosperity of their own store in particular.

In the various companies controlled by Mr. Claflin, the general supervising organization consists of Mr. Claflin, at its head; Mr. Louis Stewart, his principal associate and adviser; Mr. John C. Eames, Vice-President, of The H. B. Claflin Company, and about a dozen of most able executives among the store managers. These gentlemen comprise a board of council which considers and decides upon all important questions involving policy, management and operation of the various stores controlled. Few organizations possess so capable a managing force or give so great attention to the training of their employees, with a view to their future usefulness. This policy assures in large measure the continuance of successful operation of the business.

The system of checks and reports maintained throughout is thorough and complete, and the reports are advantageously used in the administration of the business. The results of each store and each department therein are compared with the results of the other stores and the same departments in such stores. The employees who show themselves most efficient are moved forward from department to department, and from store to store, and the inefficient are relieved. The organization is strengthened by this system and a spirit of interest among the employees is developed.

The men charged with the administration in the various stores impress us as being broad-minded business men, capable of successfully assuming larger responsibilities.

Yours truly,
HASKINS & SELLS,
Certified Public Accountants.

BRONX STORE COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Bronx Store Company, department store, 3,251-3,255 Third Avenue, corner 163d Street, by Charles L. Greenhall, attorney for these creditors: H. B. Claflin Company, $500; Hellmann, Mandell & Co., $50, and Gotham Garter and Novelty Company, $50. It was alleged that the company is insolvent and made preferential payments. Judge Hough appointed Harvey T. Andrews receiver with a bond of $5,000. Mr. Greenhall said that the liabilities are $25,000 and the assets $15,000, consisting of stock, $10,000, and fixtures, $5,000. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against the company on March 28, 1908, which was dismissed on April 22, 1908. The creditors have granted it an extension, and the old claims were paid in full. Business has been dull for some time, creditors have been pressing for payments, and several suits were commenced against the company. The company was incorporated in September, 1907, with a capital stock of $75,000. S. M. Griggs, formerly of California, became President last January, and John C. L. Rogge was Treasurer.

Importers of Colored Cotton Cloths Win Refunds of More Than $50,000.

As the result of the refusal of the United States Supreme Court to grant the Government's request for a writ of certiorari in the so-called colored cotton cases the Treasury Department will be called upon to pay out refunds to importers aggregating more than $50,000. The refunds are in the shape of duties collected by the Government, which are now decided by the courts to have been illegal.

The Government, backed by the domestic manufacturers of the cloth which is brought into competition with the foreign-made productions, has brought two distinct test cases before the Board of General Appraisers, the Circuit Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals. In nearly every instance the importers were successful in their contention for the imposition of lower duties than those alleged by the Government and the manufacturers to accrue properly on the merchandise.

The importers, whose names appear in the test litigation, include W. B. Quaintance, Titus, Blatter & Co., and Rusch & Co. The importing trade in its entirety, however, is vitally affected by the refusal of the Supreme Court to grant the Government's petition for a review of the decision made by Judges Lacombe, Coxe, and Ward in the local Federal Court of Appeals Jan. 12 last. As matters stand now the importers have been completely successful in their claims. Inasmuch as the amount of the duties in dispute were added, in most instances, by the importers to the selling price of the goods, the large refunds are practically in the form of bonuses.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The daily Consular and trade report for to-morrow notes the following trade opportunities. Further information regarding these can be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C.

CORN HUSKING AND GRINDING MACHINERY.—A South American merchant advises an American Consul that he is about to place an order for American corn husking shelling, and grinding machinery, including cleaning and fanning mills. The plant is to be operated by either a kerosene or naphtha engine, and he requests quotations, catalogues, and full details regarding the installation complete, including the engine. Prices quoted should cover each machine separately. Correspondence should be in Spanish or German.

PORTABLE HOUSES.—The Bureau of Manufactures is in receipt of a letter from a business man in Switzerland requesting the names of American manufacturers of portable houses.

AGENCY FOR TYPEWRITERS AND PATENT MEDICINES.—An American Consul in India reports that a business house in the city in which he is located is desirous of obtaining the agency of a first-class American typewriter, and also to act as agent for manufacturers of patent medicines in the United States. There appears to be a good market in that region for both lines of goods.

LIFE INSURANCE AGENCY.—A report from an American Consular officer in a city of Western Europe states that a local business man desires to become the manager or director for continental Europe of a first-class American life insurance company. The party writes and speaks four languages, and will give satisfactory references to interested companies. He is willing to fix his residence in such a city as the company may direct, but would prefer Paris or Brussels.

MACHINERY FOR RAW PRODUCT.—An American Consul in South Africa has received a special letter of inquiry from a business man in his district requesting certain information in regard to firms in the United States trading in plumbago or graphite. He also asks for information as to the prices and manufacturers and dealers in machinery for treating the raw product, &c. As the Consul has no literature in regard to this matter, he desires information, both to enable him to reply to the inquirer and for filing purposes for future reference.

COTTONSEED OIL AND PRODUCTS.—Special Agent Julien L. Brode of the Department of Commerce and Labor has forwarded a list of business firms in France that have expressed a desire to have literature, price lists, and full particulars in regard to cottonseed oil and products sent to them by American firms as soon as possible.

HARDWARE AND SPECIALTIES.—An American Consul in East Africa, replying to an inquiry from the United States, reports that there appears to be a limited market in his district for the sale of American hardware and specialties of various kinds. He forwards the name of a local business man who regards American goods highly, and who is willing to consider propositions for classes of goods which can be handled in that region.

PUBLIC WORKS IN AFRICA.—A report has been received from an American Consular officer in Africa, giving details of a plan for extensive improvements which is now under consideration. This plan, if adopted, will call for the expenditure of about $1,200,000, and will include harbor improvements, dredging, construction of lighthouses, Custom Houses, breakwaters, moles, &c., also internal improvements, such as the construction of roads, streets, paving of market places, sanitary systems, &c.

In all Long Island no cozier spot than this!

DUNTON LODGE

A residential section offering exceptional chances for investors and homeseekers to buy wisely and well.

Dunton Lodge is neither too far, nor too near. Just far enough from the city to be countrified—just far enough from the country to be citified—and combines the comfort and advantages of both. A delightful locality lying adjacent to Jamaica two minutes from Brooklyn trolley and nine minutes from Dunton Station, Long Island RR.; 56 trains a day. The new two-milion-dollar Jamaica station, where 800 trains a day will stop, will be erected within a short walk of this property.

Comfortable, tasteful homes are here, owned by permanent residents. Schools and churches are near; broad macadamized streets, gas, electricity, water, police and fire protection, free delivery, etc. A veritable garden spot, only 35 minutes from Manhattan.

No tenements, no factories, no disagreeable surroundings—simply as pleasant a spot as one could choose who desires to buy and build for a permanent home. Prices are right, terms are easy. NEW YORKERS GET BIG INSURANCE CO.

They Obtain Control of the Monongahela of Pittsburg and Plan to Enlarge It.

WILL INCREASE THE CAPITAL

New Management Will Extend Its Scope to Other States Besides Pennsylvania.

Control of the Monongahela Insurance Company of Pittsburg, the second oldest fire insurance concern in that city, has been obtained by the insurance firm of Whilden & Hancock of 105 William Street and financial interests associated with them whose identity, for the time being, they are keeping secret.

The deal, which will greatly interest the insurance world, was closed this week in Pittsburg, when William G. Whilden, senior member of Whilden & Hancock, bought 2,100 of the 4,000 shares of the stock of the company. Mr. Whilden is still in Pittsburg arranging the preliminaries for increasing the scope of the company.

It is planned to establish an office of the company in this city, and it is hinted that in time to come this office will become the principal one of the company. Other offices will be opened in Chicago, San Francisco, and Boston. At present the business of the company is confined to the State of Pennsylvania. Until the plans now under way are worked out, the main office will continue to be in Pittsburg.

Austin F. Hancock, partner of Mr. Whilden, when seen last night at his home at 620 West 116th Street, did not care to tell the exact price paid for the stock, but admitted that it was in the neighborhood of $160,000. The stock has been selling at from $75 to $80.

Mr. Hancock said there would be no change in the management of the company. Its President, John H. Claney, has been connected with the company for forty-five years, and will continue in that capacity. He is one of the most prominent fire insurance men of Pittsburg.

Nearly all of the eleven Directors in the company have retained their stock. That which was purchased was held by a large number of men, most of them residents of Pittsburg.

It is intended, Mr. Hancock said, to increase the number of Directors to probably twenty-two, and among them will be the New York financiers, whose names are at present being withheld. When the change in the Directorate is made, which will be within the next few weeks, steps will be taken to increase the capital of the company from $200,000 to $500,000, and to increase the surplus from $134,000, which it now is, to $200,000. All this will give the new owners an opportunity to expand the company's field of operations.

The company was incorporated in February, 1857, and of the authorized capital of $500,000 there was paid in at the start $34,000. The company has had a successful career. It has paid dividends on its stock every year of its existence excepting in 1871, 1872, and 1888. In those years the company was obliged to pay out unusual losses. Its average stock dividends have been 10.7 per cent. Last December it paid out 12½ per cent. on stock and a cash dividend of 6 per cent.

Among some of the older and heavier stockholders, besides President Claney, are Secretary W. K. Reifsnyder, Nathaniel Holmes, director of the Union National Bank of Pittsburg, and George Kountz of the Duquesne Distributing Company, Pittsburg. They have not disposed of their stock.

SPREAD OF STRIKE THREATENS SOUTH

Gov. Smith, Commissioner Neill, and Georgia Railroad Officials Confer on Preventive Measures.

SPURRED BY RACE ISSUE

Mails Are Still Held Up, and Autos Stalled by Pouring Rains—Town Takes Food Inventory.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 26.—The problem how to save the railroads of the South from danger of a spread of the Georgia Railroad's firemen's strike, with its disquieting negro problem, was one of the most troublesome issues presented at the conferences here to-day between United States Commissioner of Labor Charles P. Neill, Gov. Smith, General Manager T. W. Scott of the railroad, and Vice President Ball of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

In view of the race question involved the widely separated residence of three of the parties to the negotiation was noteworthy. Mr. Ball is from Toronto, Canada, while Washington is represented by Mr. Neill and Georgia by Mr. Scott and Gov. Smith.

United States mails held up since the beginning of the week, a dozen counties facing demoralization of business, and the race issue brought continually into unwholesome prominence were the factors which spurred the negotiations through hours of discussion.

Various towns in the strike district took inventory to-day of their visible supply of food. Madison reported at least fifteen days of plenty in prospect. Washington reported a shortage i nyeast and prices rising. At Lithonia Mayor Brand said: "If supplies should run short and it becomes necessary, I shall simply condemn the trainload of perishable goods now on the siding at Lithonia and tell the citizens to help themselves."

There are eleven cars of provisions at Lithonia, and ice has been suplied to maintain the perishable portion of their contents in good condition.

Another heavy blow was dealt to-day to automobile transportation that has been in operation in the territory where railroad service has ceased for nearly four days. Pouring rains stalled many of the automobiles and long wagon trains that have been transporting food and other necessities from town to town.

New facts bearing on the race issue came to light to-day. From investigation along the right of way of the railroad it was learned that most of the reported instances of throwing stones at trains were pure fabrications. The danger from such missiles thrown with malicious intent was one of the reasons given why the engineers refused to take out their trains, thereby tieing up the entire system.

Witnesses at the stopping places of the railroad during the first days of the strike say that, instead of stone throwing, crowds of men from the rural districts, many of them personal friends of the engineers, gathered around the engines and pleaded with them not to force a race issue by continuing to run trains on which white firemen had been replaced by negroes. The engineers were told that it might be very dangerous to continue such runs.

A Little Ship That Will Interest Many Millions

A few months hence a remarkable vessel will sail up the Hudson River. Millions of persons will follow its voyage with keener interest than follows a record-breaking run across the Atlantic by the giant Mauretania. It will be the "Half Moon." An exact duplicate of Henry Hudson's famous ship has just been launched at Amsterdam, and from that city The Sunday Times has this week received a very full and detailed description of the vessel. This will be published next Sunday. It will be accompanied by photographs of the new "Half Moon," launching, afloat, and other illustrations. This little vessel will be the great feature of the approaching Hudson-Fulton celebration, and the article which The Sunday Times will publish will be of great interest to everybody.

A few of the other features of next Sunday's Times may also be mentioned—Apropos of Memorial Day, which falls on next Sunday, there will be a vivid description of the fighting at "Bloody Angle," by a distinguished survivor of that battle; a capital story on how distance is being annihilated the world around, apropos of the new "Liverpool-to-Seattle-in-Nine-Days" announcement; an interesting interview with Maximilian Harden, the most-talked-of man in Germany after the Kaiser; enjoyable tales of personal adventure in Africa by Winston Churchill, who tells how he shot a white rhinoceros; some highly interesting reflections by Thomas L. Masson on "New York as a Literary Centre"; an interview with Bertillon, the Frenchman whose system for detecting criminals has been adopted the world around—and Mr. Bertillon, sitting in his office in Paris, has just identified for the authorities in San Francisco a criminal arrested in that city; Hashimura Togo, the "Japanese Schoolboy," in his efforts to master American baseball and its glossary; Francis McCullogh's continuation of his description of the capture of Constantinople, and a long list of other attractive features full of interest and timeliness.

The Picture Section will contain many pages of charming pictures. A full page will be given to one of Meissonier's canvases owned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Another page will contain many of the more notable pictures shown in this year's exhibition of the Royal Academy, London. There will be a page in which everybody will find pleasure, a large number of photographic studies of child life; a page of pictures showing many well-known society women at work for charity; unique photographs of prominent sculptors at work in their studios; photographs of the Seattle exhibition, which opens next Monday; of President Taft at the Mecklenburg celebration, of New York society women, and many other pictures.

UNION FIGHTS BUILDING CODE.

Metal Lathers Declare Their Trade Is Threatened with Destruction.

Local 46 of the Wood, Fire, and Metal Lathers' International Union has entered the Building Code revision fight by passing resolutions condemning the fireproofing provisions of the majority report of the Revision Commission. The resolutions read in part:

> The majority report of the Building Code Commission of the City of New York contains provisions that will virtually wipe out the trade of metallic lathing in the city and practically expatriate the workers of said trade from the city where their homes are located in order to obtain employment to support their wives and families, and the provisions of said majority report, in so far as it bears upon fireproof construction and reinforced concrete, are so arbitrary in their nature as to be abhorrent to all fair-minded citizens, and are in nowise justified by established facts upon which they may be grounded.

SUE FOR $30,000,000 FROM SUGAR TRUST

Trial Begun Here on Conspiracy Charges of Wrecking Segal's Sugar Company.

$10,000,000 ACTUAL LOSS

Work Begun of Obtaining a Jury—An Elaborate Array of Counsel Before Judge Holt.

Following close upon its $2,000,000 payment to the Government in settlement of the weighing fraud cases, the American Sugar Refining Company entered another and even larger battle in court yesterday. It is the suit brought by the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company (Adolph Segal's Philadelphia concern) to recover $30,000,000 damages under the Sherman anti-trust law for its complete wrecking through what it charges to be a conspiracy of the officers and Directors of the Sugar Trust. The actual damage is estimated at $10,000,000, and under the Sherman act three times that amount may be recovered. The case was begun before Judge Holt in the United States District Court and a jury yesterday. Ex-Gov. Frank S. Black opened the case for the plaintiffs.

The case grew out of the downfall of the Real Estate Trust Company of Philadelphia and the Hipple-Segal scandals which filled the newspapers at the time. As outlined by Mr. Black, the Real Estate Trust Company was loaded up with the securities of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company, and its receiver discovered that the latter concern had been put out of business by the transaction on which the present suit is based. The receiver had the suit instituted by bondholders in the name of the corporation.

A loan of $1,250,000 is at the bottom of the whole situation. The Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company had been in business from 1883 to the time of the Spanish war and then shut down, to resume again under Segal's domination along in 1903. Segal wanted to enlarge its plant and to extend its business. He reorganized it with $5,000,000 stock and $3,000,000 bonds, a large part of which his friend Hipple handled through the convenient Real Estate Trust Company. Segal himself kept 26,000 shares of the stock, a majority of the entire issue, and on this he undertook to obtain a loan to assist in the development of his plans.

Money was tight in Philadelphia, and Segal turned to New York, where he found an accommodating friend in Gustav Kissel, who had $1,250,000 which he was glad to loan. But as collateral Mr. Kissel insisted upon taking the 26,000 shares of the Pennsylvania Sugar Company which Segal owned, and in having a transfer of the voting power run with the loan, to the end that the lender should elect his own Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania concern and manage its affairs until the loan was paid off.

To all of this Segal agreed, and used the $1,250,000 borrowed money in his various ventures. Meantime the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company's new plant was standing idle, and the Board of Directors, which had been named by Mr. Kissel and his friends, took no action toward opening it. Segal could not pay the loan, and with the Pennsylvania plant closed its bonds and stock became worth little more than the paper they were written on. That was where the Real Estate Trust Company came in for its share of the trouble, with its load of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining bonds and a large part of the minority stock up as collateral for other loans.

After the receiver was appointed for the Real Estate Trust Company it was discovered that Mr. Kissel had been in communication frequently with John E. Parsons, counsel for the American Sugar Refining Company, a Director of that corporation, and the confidant and adviser of its late President, Henry O. Havemeyer. That set the receiver to investigating, with the result that he uncovered what is alleged in the bill to be a conspiracy whereby the American Sugar Refining Company, through Kissel, loaned Segal the money, put in its own dummies as Directors of the Pennsylvania concern, locked up its doors, and then sat down to see what would happen.

"Mr. Parsons is a great lawyer," said Mr. Black, "but he is not here to-day as a lawyer, but as one of the defendants in this charge of conspiracy.

"Segal never dreamed where the money was coming from, but it is plain now that it came from the American Sugar Refining Company," said Mr. Black. "And since the day that loan was made the Pennsylvania plant had remained idle on the banks of the Delaware River.

"And from the day that the dummy Philadelphia Directors walked out and the dummy New York Directors walked in the company has been in the control of the American Sugar Refining Company." He explained how the alleged dummy Directors were installed to see that the plant did not start up.

Kissel, Mr. Black said, received $100,000 as his commission in the conspiracy and 13,000 shares of the stock as well, which he sold later at $40 a share.

The receiver and bondholders of the Real Estate Trust are represented, besides ex-Gov. Black, by H. Snowden Marshall, John W. Hutchinson, and Samuel Untermyer. John G. Milburn of New York, John G. Johnson of Philadelphia, Henry W. Taft, brother of the President, and H. B. Closson represent the trust. John E. Parsons was in court yesterday with his son, Congressman Herbert Parsons, and Herbert L. McIlvaine of his law firm, but as he is a defendant in the suit his status for the time being is not among his colleagues.

The jury was obtained yesterday, but no witnesses were called up to the time of adjournment. A number of exhibits, principally deeds of the Pennsylvania company, were offered in evidence. The deposition of William J. McCahan of Philadelphia, who is 77, was read in lieu of his testimony. He was for some time President of the Pennsylvania company, and his testimony related merely to the method of doing business. The trial will be resumed to-day.

11th Begins War on The McManus.

To fight Senator Thomas J. McManus for the leadership of the Eleventh Assembly District next September, because of his failure to vote against the so-called Eleventh Avenue "Grab" bill, the Eleventh Assembly District Democratic Club was organized on Tuesday night at the Hotel Cumberland. About twelve prominent business men of the district were present at the election of officers. The officers chosen are, President, Daniel Mack; Vice Presidents, P. H. Maley and William Kelly; Secretary, James Devaney; Treasurer, John H. Collan. Mr. Mack, it is said, will be set up against Senator McManus as a candidate for the leadership of the district.

VANDERBILTS SELL A ROAD.

New York Central Gets the Port Morris & Spuyten Duyvil Line.

It came out yesterday at a hearing upon the application of the New York Central Railroad to the Public Service Commission to make a new lease of the Port Morris & Spuyten Duyvil Railroad that the stock of the subsidiary line has passed from the possession of the Vanderbilt family, where it had been held from the formation of the company, to the New York Central Railroad.

This transfer of the stock was in effect the inspiring cause of the scheme to abrogate the old lease and make a new one. The old lease had sixty years more to run, and carried an annual rental equivalent to 8 per cent. on the $989,000 of Port Morris & Spuyten Duyvil stock. It is understood that the purchase price of the stock was determined by an agreement as to its value under the terms of this lease.

The Port Morris & Spuyten Duyvil Railroad forms the all-important connecting link for the New York Central between the main line at Spuyten Duyvil and the tracks of the Harlem Division at Mott Haven, running down along the Harlem River for a distance of about five miles. Like a good many other essential links in the New York Central system, such as the Park Avenue tunnel and the bridge across the Hudson at Albany, the Port Morris Road was kept in the Vanderbilt family by the old Commodore, who organized it in 1867, and his successors.

In this connection there has developed the fact that whereas the Port Morris Road was originally organized with a capital stock of $500,000, which would allow it a capitalization of about $100,000 a mile, the capital was increased to $1,000,000 in 1871, just before the lease was made to the New York Central on a basis of 8 per cent. on the $989,000 stock issued.

Vice President Ira A. Place of the New York Central went before Public Service Commissioner Eustis yesterday to explain the Central's plan.

"All of the $989,000 stock was held until recently by private individuals and centred in a few hands," he said. "It became apparent to us that on the expiration of the lease in 1970 the stock would be widely dispersed, and under the circumstances the Central would be in a bad position to negotiate for the renewal of the lease. We effected the purchase of the stock at a price which in effect leaves the annual rental the same."

Under the new arrangement the Port Morris Road is leased to the Central in perpetuity. At yesterday's hearing, however, question was raised by Albert H. Walker of counsel for the Public Service Commission as to the right of the Port Morris to two of its four tracks. The original franchise called for the construction of a two-track road only, and neither Mr. Place nor the lawyer for the commission could determine yesterday under what specific authority the other two tracks were put in.

Mr. Place contended that the road had a right to four-track its line under the general railroad law when public convenience demanded it, but Commissioner Eustis was disposed to inquire a little further into the matter, and to this end adjourned the hearing for a few days while the attorneys for the commission investigate it.

The New York Central has spent $2,341,000 in improvements on the Port Morris & Spuyten Duyvil Road, which has never been capitalized, and it is expected that as soon as the new lease has been arranged a bond issue will be placed on the property to care for these improvements.

MAYOR WOULD RETAIN MANY.

Approves Recommendations That Would Put Good Jobs in Civil List.

Recommendations were forwarded to the State Civil Service Commission yesterday by Mayor McClellan which, if approved, will take a large number of high-salaried municipal places off the appointive list and put them in the competitive class. The Municipal Civil Service Commission has been holding hearings on the proposed changes during the past two weeks, and the recommendations approved by the Mayor are the result of resolutions passed by this body.

The city jobs which it is proposed to take off the "exempt list" include: Sanitary Superintendent of the Health Department, $7,000 a year, present incumbent, Dr. Walter Bensel; Assistant Sanitary Superintendent in each borough of the city, incumbent in Manhattan, Dr. Alonzo Blauvelt, $3,500; Attendant to the Corporation Counsel, Anthony McCarthy, $1,600; Attendant to the First Assistant Corporation Counsel in Brooklyn, Henry Ritter, $1,350; Chief of the Bureau of Licenses, Francis V. S. Oliver, Jr., $3,500; Deputy Chief of the Bureau of Licenses in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn, $2,000; Chief of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, Patrick Derry, $2,500; Executive Clerk of the Borough Presidents' offices, $2,400; Confidential Inspector of the Borough Presidents' offices in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and Queens, $1,800; Assistant Deputy Controller, Hubert L. Smith, $6,000; three Deputy Auditors of Accounts of the Department of Finance, $2,500; five Examining Inspectors, $1,500 to $1,650; five Expert Accountants, $2,500 to $4,500; twenty-six Clerks in the Board of Elections; Chief Clerk of the Board of Estimate, $4,000; Stenographer to the Board, $3,500; Assistant Secretary, $4,000; Assistant Superintendent of Ferries of the Dock Department, Lawrence Hanlon, $2,500; Cashier of the Department, Silas Strauss, $4,000; Assistant Secretary of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, John F. Skelly, $4,000; Female Probation Officer of the Court of Special Sessions; Probation Officer of the City Magistrates' Court; seven Wardens in the Department of Corrections; sixteen Examiners of the Commissioners of Accounts office, and three Superintendents of the Bureau of Dependent Adults in the Charities Department in all the boroughs.

The changes if made would operate to keep in office the present appointees in case of a change in administration, it being impossible under the civil service law to remove men classified in the competitive list except on charges.

The principal objections to the changes have been raised by the Board of Elections and the Commissioners of Accounts. In the former case it is contended that the law which created a bi-partisan board would be defeated if it were not possible to continue the division throughout the entire staff, and in the latter case it is held by the Commissioners that the Examiners are purely confidential assistants and that it is necessary for them to be discharged and replaced at will.

The State Commission will hold hearings on the changes at the office of the Municipal Commission, at 299 Broadway, next week.

F. ZIEGFELD, JR., SUED FOR GAMBLING DEBT

Biarritz Gaming House Proprietor Seeks to Recover $20,000 from Theatrical Manager.

HE SAYS HE LOST $200,000

May Put in Counter-Claim—Anna Held, His Wife, Wrote to Plaintiff, "You Can't Get Blood Out of a Stone."

Correspondence between Florence Ziegfeld, Jr., the theatrical manager, and his wife, Anna Held, on the one side and Alfred Boulant, proprietor of a gaming house at Biarritz, France, on the other, forms the star exhibit in a suit to recover $20,000 just brought here in the Supreme Court by counsel for Boulant. Ziegfeld, according to the papers in the case, refuses payment on the ground that the money was lost at roulette in Boulant's gambling place in the Fall of 1905, and that as a gambling debt it cannot legally be collected here.

Boulant takes a different view of Mr. Ziegfeld's liability. He has a bill of exchange purporting to bear Ziegfeld's signature acknowledging the indebtedness and agreeing to pay on a certain date. The whole matter will be thrashed out when the case reaches trial. The answer was filed yesterday.

Miss Held, in one of the letters, tells Boulant that he "can't get blood out of a stone," adding that her husband's "unfortunate gambling experiences in Europe" have badly tangled his financial affairs.

On the day of her departure for Europe, a few weeks ago, Miss Held announced to reporters that she had finally landed in the millionaire class and that at the close of another season she meant to retire from the stage and live on her ample income.

Boulant is represented by Henry Hoelljes of 346 Broadway, who was retained by Lionel Nunez, a Parisian lawyer, to press the caes against Ziegfeld here.

The bill of exchange bears date of October 10, 1905, and is made payable on Nov. 1 that year. It was accepted by Ziegfeld on Oct. 16, according to the complaint. In Ziegfeld's reply he says that Boulant conducts a gambling place in Biarritz "in violation of the laws of France," that he played there at roulette for credit and not for cash, and that he lost $17,600 or more. He admits giving the bill of exchange.

Several years were spent in dickering over the alleged gambling debt. Then Boulant placed the matter in the hands of a lawyer. Miss Held, upon learning of this, wrote this letter to Boulant, which is a record in the case:

> New York City, March 1, 1909.
>
> My Dear Boulant: I learned from Mr. Ziegfeld that you have placed the matter of his gambling debt to you in the hands of an attorney, which is the result of his playing "banker" at your casino at Biarritz. I am rather surprised at the step you are taking, as you very well know that this money cannot be collected through the law, and Mr. Ziegfeld feels that as you are placing it in the hands of an attorney there is only one thing for him to do, and that is to fight it.
>
> As long as you kept the matter in your own hands he considered it a debt of honor, and as soon as he was in a position to do so would have made a settlement with you; but his unfortunate gambling experiences in Europe at your place, where he lost millions of francs, left his financial matters in such a condition that they were placed in the hands of attorneys here, and he was practically forced into bankruptcy.
>
> He is doing the best he can, and intends to pay every honorable debt he owes, but you can't get blood out of a stone, and I advise your abiding the time when Mr. Ziegfeld will be financially able to make good for any money he may owe you for gambling at your place.
>
> Mr. Ziegfeld has been greatly harassed over here by attorneys who wish him to give them power of attorney to take such action against the gambling places, (which is against the law to give him chips,) with the intention of bringing action against such resorts in Europe for the benefit of Mr. Ziegfeld's creditors.
>
> I know that Mr. Ziegfeld wants to do the right thing, irrespective of the great amount of money he lost with you, but you are taking the wrong course. I beg to remain, Sincerely yours, ANNA HELD.

Several letters were written by Ziegfeld to Boulant, in which the manager sought to gain time. The original letters are in the possession of Mr. Hoelljes. Here is one:

> Paris, Oct. 19, 1905.
>
> Private.
>
> My Dear Mr. Boulant: Arrived in Paris yesterday, and immediately set about to arrange matters, as I never like to have any delay in the payment of gambling obligations. My draft for $20,000 on New York, of course, will be paid. I must use discretion with my business associates, and the moment I perfect matters amount given me at the Casse Circle will be sent you. With regards, I am, very truly,
>
> F. ZIEGFELD, Jr.
>
> Munroe & Co., 7 Rue Scribe, Paris.
>
> P. S. Am now awaiting cable from New York.

The following letter was written on Ziegfeld's own paper, with crest and "Tour Anna Held-Alice Nielsen." Under the crest is "F. Ziegfeld, Jr.":

> 86 Faubourg St. Honore, Paris.
>
> Dec. 23, 1905.
>
> My dear Mr. Boulant: I regret not being in when you called. As I explained to your representative, my lawyer went to America on my behalf, and I expect to hear from him daily. My people at home, realizing that amount of money drawn could not possibly be for legitimate expenses, they demanded explanations. If I do not hear favorably by Jan. 9 I shall sail, returning Feb. 1, when I am sure I will be in position to arrange matters satisfactorily. With many thanks,
>
> Sincerely, F. ZIEGFELD, Jr.
>
> P. S.—Please address me Munroe, 7 Rue Scribe.

Still another letter was as follows:

> American Exchange, 11 Rue Scribe.
>
> My Dear Mr. Boulant: I have just returned from America and after much trouble arranged to open my company's theatre Sept. 17. After all the money I lost gambling it has been very hard for me to accomplish this, but I finally succeeded, and after much persuasion Anna Held has consented to go to America.
>
> You may rest assured that I mean to pay you and have no intention of hiding behind the law which invalidates gambling claims, but just now I am powerless to pay you, and I regret you sent to Anna Held's house, as she is again very much annoyed and threatens not to go to America.
>
> I shall pay you as soon as possible and you may address me care of Munroe, 7 Rue Scribe. But I assure you no efforts on your part are necessary. When I have the money you shall have it, as I mean to settle my gambling debts first. Sincerely,
>
> F. ZIEGFELD, Jr.

"This suit has been started four years after the affair happened," said Ziegfeld last night, "because it is reported that I am making some money now, and these people think that I'll be willing to pay over a large amount to avoid notoriety.

"As a matter of fact, I lost $200,000 that day in that gambling house. It was a game of baccarat, and I was the banker. That amount I paid over to the house, and they also contended that I owed $20,000 more. I afterward had reason to believe that I had been robbed.

"Now that suit has been started I shall put in a counter claim for $160,000."

Hitchcock Back from Havana.

Postmaster General Frank Hitchcock arrived in this city yesterday from Havana, where he has been for the last two weeks for his health. At the Manhattan Hotel, where he is staying for a few days, he said he had transacted no business during his absence. He said he felt much benefited by the ocean voyage and expected to resume his duties in Washington shortly.

HARRIMAN-HILL TRAFFIC DEAL.

Joint Use of Northern Pacific Tracks in Puget Sound Region Arranged.

The Union Pacific, it was announced yesterday, has reached an agreement with the Northern Pacific and Great Northern for the joint use of about 135 miles of the Northern Pacific's line from Portland to South Tacoma. This arrangement between the Hill and Harriman lines in a territory in which the Union Pacific was projecting a new line to compete with the Hill lines was looked upon yesterday as an important development in the Northwestern railroad situation, indicating as it does a closer understanding between the two rival systems in that territory.

The Union Pacific will pay a rental for the use of these 135 miles of line, and the line will be operated in the joint interest of all three roads. It will be made a double-track line, equipped to handle the traffic of all three systems between Portland and South Tacoma. After reaching South Tacoma over the Northern Pacific line the Union Pacific will enter its own terminals at Tacoma, and from that city to Seattle to the north the Union Pacific will use the line in which it recently purchased a half interest from the St. Paul. At Seattle the Union Pacific has already done a good deal of work on its terminals, but it will take about a year more, it is learned, to complete the terminals.

Julius Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman lines, in making the announcement of this arrangement yesterday, said that further construction work would be undertaken by the Union Pacific, which will give it better connection with the Northern Pacific line at Portland.

Both Mr. Hill and Mr. Harriman have deprecated the suggestion that a war was on between the two systems for control of the traffic to and from the Puget Sound ports. The present understanding is, as a matter of fact, in keeping with previous agreements between the Hill and Harriman interests in the Northwest.

HOME FOR BANK OF MONTREAL

It Purchases the 12-Story Building at 64 and 66 Wall Street.

The Bank of Montreal, whose representatives in this city have occupied a floor in the Redmond Building, at 31 Pine Street, has bought a home of its own at 64 and 66 Wall Street. This property, consisting of a twelve-story building on a plot 50 by 100, was purchased by the bank from the Fifth Avenue and Eighteenth Street Realty Company, of which Henry Corn is President. Negotiations were conducted through Eidlitz & Hulse, attorneys, of 31 Nassau Street.

The bank's new home is on the north side of Wall Street, between William and Pearl Streets, in the block with the Central Trust Company and the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company, and diagonally opposite the old Custom House, now occupied by the National City Bank. According to report, the price paid for the property was about $800,000.

The bank will move into the building as soon as the necessary alterations can be completed. These changes will include the remodeling of the ground floor stores into a suitable banking room and the construction of a vault.

The building was put up four or five years ago by the Fifth Avenue and Eighteenth Street Realty Company, which acquired the site from Charles A. Gould in a trade for a property at Fifth Avenue and Eighteenth Street.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Many Buyers in the Market and More Mills Operating.

The upturn in the iron and steel trade, which has been steady for the last few weeks, is made the leading subject of comment in the trade journals issued to-day. The Iron Age says:

> Betterment in the iron trade is more marked. The urgency with which some buyers are pressing for deliveries indicates the extent to which stocks were allowed to run down; also that some of the mills are not yet keyed up to the new pace.
>
> The Steel Corporation is now running 74.5 per cent. of its blast furnace capacity. The two Riverside blast furnaces and the steel works and pipe mills there have been ordered in. No. 8 Furnace at South Chicago was to start Tuesday and another furnace at South Chicago is to follow. It is estimated that by the first week in June 80 per cent. of the pig iron capacity of the Steel Corporation will be in operation.
>
> That the activity in steel has quite outrun that in foundry lines is evident from the preponderance of basic iron sales in the pig iron market. In Eastern territory a total of 125,000 tons of basic iron has been taken by open-hearth steel plants. The price has advanced from $15 to $15.50, delivered at Eastern Pennsylvania mills.
>

The Iron Trade Review says:

> The heaviest buying by the railroads is in the Chicago district, where orders include 24,000 tons of shapes and plates for the Simplex Railway Appliance Company, 100,000 tons of rails, contracts for a large number of new cars and for the repair of several thousand old ones, and orders for 100 locomotives for the Union Pacific and 150 for the Harriman lines.
>
> Recent buying of steel bars has brought heavy specifications to the mills and some interests have advanced quotations to 1.25c., Pittsburg, but 1.20c. is still the rate at which the selling is being done.

Our Cotton Contracts Well Liked.

President George Brennecke of the Cotton Exchange announced yesterday that the "ideal contract" recently adopted by the New Orleans Cotton Exchange is a copy of the one which has been used on the New York Cotton Exchange for the last twenty-five years. He said that the Agricultural Bureau's invitation to the leading Exchanges of the country to agree upon a universal standard of cotton grades had resulted in the adoption of the standards which have been used on the Exchange here for twenty-seven years with slight modifications.

Delay in Selling the Produce Exchange

At the annual meeting of the Produce Exchange members held Tuesday the Treasurer's report showed total gross receipts of $338,782 and a net surplus of $72,719. President Ring, in commenting on the plan to sell the Exchange building at Bowling Green, said the great value of the property naturally narrowed the possible purchasers to a few, and this would no doubt cause delay, he said, in marketing the property.

Double Stock Exchange Holiday.

The Stock Exchange will be closed on Saturday preceding Decoration Day. The Governing Committee voted yesterday to grant the petition of the members to close on that day. Trading on Exchange therefore, will be suspended from the close of business to-morrow until next Tuesday.

ALDERMEN PLAY BALL TO HELP A HOSPITAL

Plenty of Fun at League Grounds, the Republicans Winning by a Score of 11 to 10.

FAT CITY FATHERS BARRED

"Little Tim" Sullivan's Men Nearly Won in the Ninth Inning, but Lost on Magistrate Moss's Decision.

There was an afternoon of excitement up on Washington Heights yesterday when the news got around that two teams picked from the Board of Aldermen were going to play baseball at the American League grounds for the benefit of the St. Laurence Hospital, which "Big Tom" McAvoy, leader of the Twenty-third Assembly District, is trying to establish in the heights section. Several thousand persons cheerfully paid a dollar each to see what an Alderman in baseball costume looks like in action. Many women even took along their children, just as if it were a circus day. There was plenty of fun.

There was considerable disappointment, however, for only two of the City Fathers were of traditional Aldermanic avoirdupois, "Little Tim" Sullivan having seen to it that only the youngest and leanest of the board got on the diamond. The teams were chosen from the Democratic and Republican members, and when the excitement had subsided the score board at the north end of the grounds bore the announcement that the Republicans had won by a score of 11 to 10.

The Aldermen turned out in force and there were plenty of rooters for each side. Among those who occupied grand stand seats were "Little Tim" Sullivan, Sheriff Foley, Borough Presidents Coler and Cromwell, Magistrate Finn, Percy Nagel, "Reggie" Doull, "Larry" Mulligan, "Jim" Smith, Senator Owens, Charles White, George J. Kraus, Eugene Comisky, "Johnny" White, ex-Corporation Counsel John Whalen, John Curry, James J. Martin, and Thomas McAvoy.

Magistrate Joseph Moss was the umpire, and while there was plenty of dissatisfaction with his decisions, especially from a contingent of small boys in the bleachers, none had the temerity to object to the Magistrate's rulings.

When Bird Coler leisurely strolled across the grounds the cry went up that the Brooklyn Borough President was to play short stop.

"I will pitch," agreed Mr. Coler, "if Controller Metz will catch, for I want to throw a few things at him." Mr. Metz, however, did not show up.

After a lot of preliminary practice, in which "Little Tim" Sullivan joined just for the amusement of the fans, the teams lined up as follows:

DEMOCRATS.	REPUBLICANS.
Hines, 2b.	Beyer, 1b.
Rendt, 1b.	Esterbrook, 2b.
McDonald, ss.	Davis, p.
Mulcahy, c.	Morrison, c.
Brown, 3b.	Johnson, ss.
McCann, rf.	Schloss, 3b.
Kavanagh, lf.	Collins, lf.
Cole, p.	Emener, cf.
O'Reilly, cf.	Case, rf.

Things looked pretty bad for "Little Tim's" aggregation up to the ninth inning. The Republicans were four runs ahead and "Reggie" Doull was looking so blue that the band from the Catholic Protectory struck up "Sullivan" and "Hurrah for Baffin's Bay."

Then it was that Magistrate Moss made the weightiest decision of his life. Mulcahy sent a hot grounder to centre and reached home carrying two others with him. The score then stood 10 to 11, with two men out and Alderman Brown up. He bunted and made the race of his life to first, getting there about the same time as the ball. Every Democrat in the park contended that Brown was safe, but with a firm set of his jaw, as a man who had determined to do his duty as he saw it, Magistrate Moss decided that Brown was out. In the rumpus that followed the Magistrate made a run for the Subway and got lost in the crowd.

CITY TO RENT THE TRIANGLE.

Metz Is Authorized to Lease Its Brooklyn Bridge Terminal Holdings.

At the session of the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday, Controller Metz was authorized to advertise for bids on the lease of the property bounded by the Manhattan terminal of the Brooklyn Bridge, Park Row and North William Street. This property was acquired by the city in the condemnation proceedings for the new terminal and Municipal Building.

The rental to-day approximates $36,000 a year, and the Controller says he believes he can get $50,000 by letting the property to the highest bidder. The Mayor recently vetoed a bill passed by the Legislature calling for the reconveyance of the property to its original owners at a price not to exceed the figure at which it was condemned.

CHASE A BANKRUPT IN A TUG.

Kaufman, Aboard a Liner, Eludes Deputy Marshals and Goes Abroad.

The story of an exciting two hours' chase down the Bay in an endeavor, by two deputy marshals, to overtake the outgoing North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on Tuesday, was told yesterday at a meeting of creditors of Bloom & Kaufman, wholesale dealers in cotton goods, of 67 East Twelfth Street, held in the office of Abraham Gruber, at 170 Broadway.

The meeting was called for the purpose of considering an offer made by Mr. Gruber, on behalf of the bankrupts, of 75 cents on the dollar, payable 50 cents in cash and 25 cents in a six months' note. Only one creditor appeared, but James N. Rosenberg, representing a number of them, said the offer would not be accepted, and that the affairs of the firm had been placed before District Attorney Jerome for investigation.

Martin Kaufman, one of the partners, whose whereabouts remained unknown to anxious creditors, was the object of the pursuit by the deputy marshals. It coming to the notice of several of the creditors that Kaufman intended sailing on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse last Tuesday, they obtained a writ from Judge Hough in the United States District Court ordering Kaufman to be taken off the vessel, but when the deputy marshals reached the pier at Hoboken they found that the liner had sailed half an hour previously. A tug was chartered and the deputy marshals started down the Bay to overtake the big steamer, but after a two hours' chase the attempt was given up.

Blames Racing Law for Ferry Loss.

In announcing the receipts of the Thirty-ninth Street municipal ferry for 1908 yesterday, the Controller said that the decrease of $29,660 from the figures for 1907 was due more than anything else to the anti-race-track betting law. The Staten Island ferry receipts also fell off $11,883 last year.

422 PUPILS HURT AT PLAY.

Victims of Vehicles—Vacation Playgrounds to Open June 1.

Announcement was made yesterday by Supt. William H. Maxwell that the playgrounds for school pupils will be opened on June 1 and continued throughout the vacation period between 9 in the morning and 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

In the talk which preceded the adoption of resolutions to this effect by the Board of Education it was stated by Commissioner Katzenberg that during the last 105 school days 422 school children have been maimed by vehicles while playing in front of the schools.

Alfred Mosely made a plea to the board for higher pay for the teachers and also for a closer bond between the schools of Great Britain and America.

"Great Britain and the United States," he said, "have much to learn from each other. The time may soon come when each country may lend its moral support to the other. As an instance of that I may mention the Spanish-American war, when England showed that blood is thicker than water."

There was presented to the board a petition from the men teachers advocating higher pay for the women teachers, their minimum salaries now being only $600 per year. Seven hundred and twenty dollars was suggested as the proper amount.
